Money, Much Mixed.
Morrison of Texas.
One Little Bank.
State Number Eleven.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

IF YOU THOUGHT yesterday that you understood money and "high finance," you may change your mind as you read today's cables from London about "stabilizing the dollar," "pegging the pound," etc.

The United States, you are told, offered "to stabilize the dollar at a value of $4.30," which means that one British pound would be worth $4.30. Great Britain wants to "stabilize our dollar at $3.75 to the pound." The United States offered a compromise on $4 to the pound. Yesterday in London you could buy a British pound for $4.09¾, which is an improvement. The less American money needed to buy a pound, the better the American money.

TO THE AVERAGE American, dollars are dollars, and lucky he who has a million of them. He cannot understand why it should be necessary to do any stabilizing.

Let Europe sell our dollars too cheap if she chooses, and regret it afterward. Why should we suddenly admit that this country, with the world's largest supply of gold, is issuing inferior money?

RALPH W. MORRISON, giant cattleman from Texas, believes in talking and dressing "United States." As a delegate at the conference in London he appeared dressed in gray business clothes. Urged to do so, he changed to a "stove-pipe hat, black tail coat and striped trousers." Anything to oblige.

But signs printed in French on little cards, "Priere De Ne Pas Fumer," meaning "Please Do Not Smoke," left him cold. He appears daily smoking a large cigar.

An English paper was much amused when it developed that Morrison, of Texas, had never heard of Dr. Benes, representing Czecho-Slovakia at the League of Nations.

Mr. Morrison, however, appears to know who Uncle Sam is, and also that European nations owe him money and ought to pay it.

A GOOD BANK, well located, well run, is a good property. Long years ago the late J. Pierpont Morgan advised friends to buy stock in "a little bank," with its entrance down two steps, in the basement of a private house on the west side of Fifth avenue, just above Forty-fourth street, directly across the avenue from Delmonico's. The bank was located there for the convenience of Mr. Morgan's friends, who lunched at Delmonico's often.

Delmonico's is gone, the last Delmonico building is torn down. But the "little" Fifth avenue bank still goes marching on. Yesterday it declared a "special dividend" of $10, besides the regular dividend at the rate of $24 a year. On that occasion, the advice that Mr. Morgan gave was good.

ELEVEN STATES in succession have voted in favor of repealing the prohibition amendment. Massachusetts, the eleventh, yesterday announced her vote, four to one in favor of "no more prohibition."

Boston voted ten to one against the Eighteenth Amendment.

Those who thought it impossible that thirty-six states would vote against prohibition are changing their minds.

A CONGRESSIONAL committee that investigated the loss of the Akron will supplement its report by warning the Navy against applying to the new airship, Macon, "the same mistaken policy" that resulted in destruction of the Akron. The committee will suggest, "in a roundabout way, that Commander Charles E. Rosendahl and Lieut. Commander H. V. Wiley be taken from sea duty and returned to the Macon's command."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT might order this done, and in no "roundabout way."

To take an officer who has learned how to command an airship and put him on a floating deck while some inexperienced officer risks a new airship and the lives of its crew, is a little worse than red tape stupidity.

THE AERZTLICHE MITTEILUNGEN, most important medical organ in Germany, suggests a new plan for solving race problems. The government would pay a bonus to "seven groups" and in return for the bonus members of each group would allow themselves to be "sterilized," made incapable of having children. The seven groups are "the weak minded, the insane, the epileptic, the criminal, the deaf and dumb, sufferers from hereditary diseases, and persons of foreign race."

The last named "persons of foreign race" are persons of the Jewish race, according to the Hitler formula.

DR. VELLGUTH, representing the "League of German Doctors," says:

"The advantage to the state would be well worth the cost."

CARNEGIE GIVES WORKERS VOICE

For the first time since the Homestead Steel strike of 1892, the Carnegie Steel Company will deal collectively with its employes.

A plan for an employe representation to fit in with the provisions of the national industrial recovery act, was announced today.

The plan provides that representation shall range from one representative for each 100 employes in the smaller plants to one representative for each 300 employes in large plants.

Employes, through their representatives, who will be nominated by them next Tuesday and elected on June 23, will voice their interests in matters of working conditions and general industrial relations.

The plan will remain in effect during the term of the national industrial recovery act.

The scheme guarantees to employes immunity from retaliation for their actions as representatives. If they feel the company is retaliating they have the right to protest to officers of the company and, if that fails, to the State Department of Labor and to the United States Secretary of Labor, whose decision must be final.

$200,000 in Opium Seized on Liner

America Denies Concessions on Stabilization

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(Universal.)—A statement appearing in the London Daily Herald that the American monetary experts, "under the persuasive influence" of Montagu Norman, are reducing the American stabilization point for the pound from $4.30 to a little above $4, was characterized here today as a crass misstatement of the attitude of the Roosevelt administration.

First, it was pointed out that the American monetary commission has no plenary power to fix the stabilization figure.

Second, it was authoritatively stated that the administration would seek parity with the pound far above the $4 mark mentioned in the London newspaper and closer to the $4.86 parity that prevailed before England went off the gold standard.

COMPROMISE ON VETS LOOMS

EUROPE WINS OVER U. S. ON DEBTS

Britain Sees Death of Pact as Roosevelt Accepts 'Token'

International News Service.

The semi-annual installment on the foreign debts owed by European nations to the United States fell due today.

Great Britain announced payment of $10,000,000 in silver, as an acknowledgment of the $75,950,000 due.

The Polish Embassy informed the United States it could not pay the $3,559,062 due.

Italy said she would pay $1,000,000 of the $13,545,000 due.

Part payments will bring America's receipts to 10 per cent of the $143,000,000 due.

The debt situation overshadowed deliberations of the World Economic Conference, where oratory held sway.

Britain, beginning a new drive for cancellation or drastic revision, is ready to send a debt mission to Washington if President Roosevelt expresses a desire to deal direct with the government on the issue. Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, may head the mission.

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Europe today scored its first important victory in the latest drive to virtually wipe out the 11 billion dollars in debts owed this nation.

With one group of debtor nations led by France defaulting outright, and another group led by Great Britain threatening to default on the $144,000,000 due this government today, President Roosevelt was forced into a position where he was faced with accepting small partial payments or getting nothing at all.

10 PER CENT TOTAL

The amount of the partial payments expected from Great Britain, Italy, Czechoslovakia and possibly one or two other debtor nations, however, will total only about 10 per cent of the $144,000,000 due.

Thus, the debtors have succeeded in forcing upon the United States at least one payment which is in line with the Lausanne

AMERICA WINS PARLEY FIGHT

LONDON, June 15.—(AP.)—The United States achieved a great and hard-won victory in the World Economic Conference with the election of James M. Cox as chairman of the vital Monetary Committee by the Steering Commitee late today.

The designation of the American was unanimous. His name was presented by the Frenchman, Georges Bonnet, who had himself been a candidate. Bonnet had bitterly opposed Cox's election until a compromise was effected among warring groups in mid-afternoon.

Opposition to the American had been based on grounds that the chairman should come from a gold standard country.

Finance Minister Guido Jung, of Italy, was given the vice-chairmanship and M. Bonnet, the U.S. Probes Benn's Taxes

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, June 15.—Agents from the income tax division of the federal Department of Internal Revenue have been permitted to examine data in the possesssion of the moribund Senate utility investigating committee, it became known today.

The examination was made this week, after the committee had met Monday and practically confessed its impotency to continue an investigation of the Pinchot charges that there had been improprieties committed either by former Public Service commissioners or utility corporations.

PINCHOT ALLEGATIONS

In the data were the Pinchot allegations that former Commissioner James S. Benn had a total 10-year income of $600,000, while his salary for that period was only $100,000. The Revenue Department officials were seeking information as to whether Benn had made a proper return on his entire income.

Franklin Spencer Edmonds, counsel for the Senate committee, turned all of the documents in his possession over to the investigators after talking with officials of the committee.

EDMONDS SILENT

Mr. Edmonds today had no more statements to issue about the future of the committee. It is accepted that the committee has not a leg to stand on in intimating it may still possess life, and that the intimation is not supported by any settled belief among members.

Any further controversy between the Republican organization and the Governor must be carried on by the Senate committee on executive nominations through examination of Pinchot appointees to the commission when their names come up for confirmation at the special session next winter.

BANK QUIZ LEAK SOURCE SOUGHT

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, June 15.—The Senate Banking Investigating Committee and Banking Secretary William D. Gordon today pledged joint energy to attempt prosecution of any employe of the Banking Department who revealed the letter of William Louis McGee, deputy banking secretary, asking state deputies in closed banks to report on the state of notes any committee member or Edward Martin, Republican state chairman, might have in a bank under liquidation.

The pledge followed a fiery half-hour of questioning by committee members of Gordon and McGee, during which Gordon denied that political bias had ever actuated him in his conduct of the Banking Department.

McGee naively admitted that he

MONACA 'FIX' CONSTABLE HUNTED

Glenfield Man Shuns Park's Sleuths in Embracery Case

Edward E. Costello, high constable of Glenfield, today was accused as the "fixer" who approached three members of the jury panel which was scheduled to hear the case against the alleged proprietors of the Monaca Club.

On orders from District Attorney Andrew T. Park, county detectives last night made information charging Costello with embracery.

Today county detectives and constables couldn't find Costello. When the sleuths visited his home in Center avenue, Glenfield, last night and talked to his wife, it is understood that a friend hurried to the Glenfield ball park, where Costello was, and warned him of the visit. Glenfield police said he hadn't returned home all night.

CHARGE DENIED

Yesterday Costello told a reporter for the Sun-Telegraph that he was not a "fixer," that furthermore he didn't even know Ed Stringert, the Ben Avon iceman, who had said he accompanied Costello on the visits to jurors' homes.

It is understood the charge was filed before Justice of the Peace Margaret Morgan, of Sewickley, although she refused to talk about the case.

The charge was filed after the Sun-Telegraph had located Stringert, who, without hesitation told of taking Costello to the homes of the three jurors and introducing him last Sunday—three days before the trial was to be held. Stringert said Costello posed as "Mr. Brown."

NAMED CONSTABLE

Costello was appointed high constable by Glenfield's Council a year ago. He is also an agent for the Humane Society, a state fire warden and working part time as a draughtsman for the American Bridge Company at Ambridge. Married, he is the father of two children.

The jurors' homes in Ohio Township to which Stringert said he had taken Costello were those of Mrs. Herman Schuler, Sr., Frank Ward and a Mrs. Sheffel.

The trial of the "Three Toms" who are charged with operating the Monaca Club as Oakland's swankiest night spot was postponed yesterday until next Tuesday, when Judge Samuel H. Gardner agreed that "inflammatory articles" had been printed in a newspaper. The three Toms are Tom Coyne, brother of Senator James J. Coyne; Tom (Goose) Goslin, South Side figure, and Tom Dolan.

HOMESTEAD TAX TRIAL FREES 3

Three of six defendants in the Homestead tax assessment case were freed by Judge W. Heber Dithrich today, on the ground that the commonwealth had not proved its charges.

Those whom the court directed to be acquitted were Jesse Honse, president of Homestead Council; Martin Delaney, councilman, and Port Eckles, superintendent of schools.

The remaining defendants are Burgess John J. Cavanaugh, C. J. McBride, former secretary of the County Tax Board, and William Dee, former sub-assessor. They are charged with conspiracy in connection with alleged juggling of tax assessments for political purposes.

George J. Schad, former head of the Tax Board, called by the defense, testified that in 1929 he had been sent to Homestead by the late J. G. Armstrong, former chairman of the County Commissioners, to look over the tax assessment situation. He said he conferred with Cavanaugh, then a member of the Tax Board, Honse, Eckles and Delaney. All changes in assessments made by Cavanaugh and McBride were later ratified by the Tax Board, Schad testified.

Baer Here, Doesn't Care If He's Called Goofy

Max Baer doesn't care what they say about him, just so they keep his name in the newspapers and don't misspell it, and admit he can fight.

Stories in the papers say he is eccentric, and worse. But he doesn't care. Let them hop to it. It's all good for the box office.

The California heavyweight, who became the outstanding challenger for Jack Sharkey's world heavyweight championship by technically knocking out Max Schmeling in New York a week ago tonight, said so himself as he arrived in Pittsburgh this morning with Jack Dempsey to open an exhibition tour in the North Braddock Bowl tonight.

Baer, wearing his now famous broad smile, was the essence of graciousness as reporters, reporteresses and photographers besieged him as he stepped off the train in the Pennsylvania Station at 9:15 o'clock. He wore a topcoat to ward off the chilliness, but no hat. The weather was quite different from the heat of the night he defeated Schmeling, and he remarked it.

One of the reporters asked him about his plans to marry June

Six men from the Fourth Ward told federal authorities today they had been threatened with bodily harm because they had been blamed for supplying information used in the federal grand jury probe of the Thirty-second District Congressional election. Democrats in House Vote to Stand by President

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—A compromise in the dramatic battle between President Roosevelt and a revolting Senate over liberalization of slashes in compensation for disabled war veterans loomed this afternoon as the Democratic membership o fthe House voted to stand by the administration's drastic economy program.

The House Democrats in conference voted 170 to 35 to support the President by sending the $650,000,000 independent offices bill, with its veterans' economy "rider," to conference.

This meant House rejection of the Steiwer-Cutting amendment plan for liberalizing veterans' compensation, which the Senate adopted in a striking revolt last night.

COMPROMISE LIKELY

There were indications the whole controversy over veterans' compensation would be settled in conference between the House and Senate with a compromise adopted in the end.

It will be acceptable to the President, but it will protect the most seriously disabled veterans against the ruthless slashes ordered by the Budget Bureau under the original economy act.

The showdown on the Democrats' course came after President Roosevelt had prepared a bristling message to accompany a veto of the veterans' measure as amended in the Senate.

At the caucus, with angry voices penetrating beyond the huge oak doors of the House chamber, Democratic leaders staged a last-ditch fight to hold the overwhelmingly Democratic House in line for President Roosevelt.

The Democratic leaders, responding to urgent appeals by the President, urged the 313 Democrats in the House to reject the

FROST IN JUNE SETS RECORD

Smashing all records, the mercury descended to 41 here today, to the accompaniment of heavy frost.

The thermometer reading broke the record for this date, established in 1917, when 47 was reported, and is the lowest temperature ever recorded here this late in the season, since the Weather Bureau station was established here in 1874.

Frost, which was general and particularly heavy in low-lying sections, was said by gardeners not to have caused any damage to vegetation.

While the mercury in Pittsburgh was reported officially as 41, in outlying districts lower temperatures were reported. Mt. Lebanon reported an unofficial 32.

Sweat Shops Blamed On Boards of Trade

That is the indictment spread across the records of the special Legislative Investigating Committee as Gov. Gifford Pinchot announced today. He is considering calling an immediate special session to act on social measures, including old age pensions, maximum hours and minimum wages.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Pinchot, continuing in the role of crusader, marched this afternoon in another anti-sweat shop picketing demonstration at Mahonoy City.

Charges involving the Chambers of Commerce were made yesterday by E. Ray Enders, state labor inspector, during the committee's hearing at Shamokin. More child workers voiced complaints. Enders said in labor law violations it was often necessary to meet opposition of trade bodies as well as the offending manufacturers.

Two appointees of Gov. Pinchot, Clarence Mosser and T. J. Gallagher, added their criticism. Gallagher asserted:

Meanwhile, its hearings in the anthracite region ended, the committee moves into the Norristown-Doylestown area July 6 for a two-day session and a week later it will spend three days in the vicinity of Pittsburgh.

PARTY CAUCUS STANDS BEHIND PRESIDENT

Meeting Spurns Plan Offered in Senate

Cutting-Steiwer Senate amendment and send the bill back to conference with the Senate.

The lanky Representative Joseph Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic floor leader, appealed to the House members to make one last stand with the President.

He was aided by Representatives Patman, (Dem.), of Texas, and Browning, (Dem.), of Tennessee—leaders in the original rebellion against the drastic $420,000,000 veterans' economy act.

Against him stood a number of members of the rank and file of Congress, among them members who frankly declared the party would sacrifice the soldiers' vote if Congress bowed to the President.

All of the influence of the Democratic leaders was invoked to prevent the Senate rebellion from engulfing the House.

TAMMANY IN LINE

New York Tammany members were reported to have received direct orders from John F. Curry, leader of Tammany Hall, to hold fast to the President's proposed compromise.

Representatives Shannon and Lee, of Missouri, were among the Democrats who declared frankly in the secret caucus that they would vote to override the President, even if he vetoes the Cutting-Steiwer amendment. Lee is reported to have said:

"Why, the Republican party lived off the soldier vote for 60 years after the Civil War."

He advised Democrats to deal liberally with the World War veterans.

Bitter feeling engulfed the House chamber. Guns were turned upon the youthful Director of the Budget, Lewis W. Douglas, held responsible for the harsh provisions of the economy act by many House members. z z z

Although Douglas resigned from the House to help balance the budget and left his colleagues regretfully, he was assailed on all sides—e—ven being charged with having changed decisions of the President favorable to the veterans.

After the conclave one member of the House said:

"I am afraid that the bitter feeling will last a long time, and the Democratic ranks will be split in the next Congress."

The behind-the-doors conference was a free-for-all, with only the white-haired Speaker Henry T. Rainey, remaining aloof.

As the members shouted their speeches in the caucus chamber, Rainey remained in his private office awaiting the verdict. He had already announced he would fight to the last for the President believed Gen. Martin might be a member of the committee, though it was made up only of Senators and members of the House.

Gordon and McGee readily admitted the letter was "a foolish mistake," and declared they had been attempting to discover "the rat" who had given it to the newspapers.

POLITICS LINKED

Committee members were plainly convinced the letter had political animus because of the inclusion of the name of Martin, between whom and Gov. Pinchot a bitter feud has existed for some time.

Representative Elwood Turner, of Delaware County, and Senator Harry Shapiro, of Philadelphia, were anxious to know why the letter had been written when there were other means available through which the same information could be secured.

McGee said he had ordered it written after a conference with Gordon on subject matter to be placed before the committee in response to a series of written questions.

Gordon said he had not known about the letter, written from McGee's Philadelphia office, until he heard it had been printed in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The letter asked officials in charge of closed banks for information as to notes, if any, of the six members of the committee, and Gen. Martin, together with any information as to whether efforts had been made to compromise the indebtedness, and whether the offers were in writing.

"TREACHERY" CHARGED

Gordon said:

"The circumstances surrounding the revelation of this letter were treachery to me as well as to members of the committee. Through J. C. Chaplin I have been endeavoring to discover from what source the letter was sescured for publication."

Senator Shapiro said:

"We'll probably help you."

Turner pressed McGee as to his reason for singling out committee members and Martin in his request for information on notes.

Turner said:

"The information we requested did not mention the names of any persons with notes."

"No."

"There are no names in the data you have furnished the committee this morning."

"No."

"Then why the specific requests for information about committee members?"

"There have been many instances where persons in political life had notes in closed banks. When offers of payment have been made the matter has been taken up with Dr. Gordon. I wanted to know if there had been any offers of compromise in these cases. And whether we had erred."

NOTES OF DEPUTIES

Senator Shapiro developed Banking Department deputies also have notes in closed banks. McGee insisted these notes were being paid off. Shapiro asked:

"Are deputies receiving as high as $7, 500a year being paid while in charge of closed banks?"

McGee said:

"I believe there is one such case."

"Why were you interested in seeing whether there had been any treading on the toes of the committee?"

"We feared we might get rougher treatment."

"You knew the committee was made up of members of the Senate and House?"

"Yes."

McGee said he did, but that he didn't know Martin had never been a member of the Senate or House. He said he got the committee list from a newspaper and, at Shapiro's direction, promised to try to produce the clipping.

Shapiro continued:

"Why was it necessary to send this letter broadcast? You know that I, from Philadelphia, wouldn't have any notes in a Pittsburgh bank."

"Well, it was very foolish to do, as it turned out."

Committee members plainly were of the suspicion that the letter had been intended to intimidate them. Again and again they asked McGee if he had any idea how it had become public. McGee said no.

Turner asked:

"Was the letter as printed as accurate copy?"

McGee replied:

"The news clipping I saw was so nearly correct that it astounded me."

McGee said he knew of no appointment which had been made in the Banking Department because of politics, and the committee broke into laughter.

Discussion of the letter took the entire time of the open hearing, which was preceded by an executive session presided over by Senator Harry Bell, of Uniontown, chairman of the committee.

At the opening the questioning of witnesses was turned over to Turner and Shapiro.

Vet Dispute In Brief

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(INS.)—The tremendous clash in Congress over liberalizing veteran's compensation revolved today around four provisions in the Steiwer-Cutting plan, excluded from the administration plan.

These differences were the Steiwer-Cutting provisions:

1—Declaring it the intent of Congress "to preserve service connections (except misconduct and fraud cases) unless affirmative evidence clearly discloses that the disease or disability had its inception before or after the period of military or naval service and not aggravated thereby."

2—That in all cases where service connection shall be preserved under a review of presumptive claims, "not less than 75 percentum of the payments made on March 20, 1933, shall continue and the determination of service connection in such review shall be final."

3—Permitting a reduction in the rate of compensation if the degree of disability is reduced upon review but providing that the new compensation shall be not less than 25 per cent of the old rates for the lower degree of disability.

4—Limiting reductions in pensions paid veterans of the Spanish American war or to widows and dependents of both Spanish-American and Civil wars to 25 per cent of amounts paid prior to March 20, 1933.

The administration plan had none of these four provisions.

Pig Iron Figures Win Wife More Alimony

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 15.—(AP.)—Increased car loadings, booming grain prices and the glowing gains made in such commonplaces as pig iron and steel ingots have won Mrs. Nanette Gude Bayne the restoration of her $1,500 a month alimony.

This was a splendid idea—this citing of facts and figures from the financial pages in an alimony hearing. Mrs. Bayne, who has been divorced from Jasper Bayne, clubman, for five years, recently had her alimony reduced to $750. Bayne, who since has remarried, contended at that time that the depression had made it more difficult to meet the $1,500 figure originally fixed.

Mrs. Bayne went before Justice Joseph Morschauser yesterday, however, with her pig iron statistics. She prefaced them with this statement:

"I do not believe the present is the proper time to make a reduction in alimony, because there are already unmistakable signs of business recovery."

The court was impressed. It ordered the $1,500 monthly alimony for Mrs. Bayne restored.

Mrs. Bayne is the daughter of the late O. J. Gude, wealthy "billboard king" of several years ago.

NAVAL BOARD O. K.'S MACON

WASHINGTON, June 15—(AP.)—Secretary Swanson announced today the special trial board had recommended that the Navy accept the new airship, Macon.

The board, headed by Rear Admiral George Day, reported the airship's flights were completed and recommended acceptance "subject to routine post-trial inspection." He denied reports to the effect that the Macon's rudder was damaged during the flight, which ended last night.

Secretary Swanson told reporters he foresaw no change in the policy by which naval fliers are subject to sea duty.

The congressional committee which investigated the Akron disaster, has just termed this custom "a mistaken policy."

WHITNEY TELLS MITCHELL LOAN

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—George Whitney, partner in the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., told a Federal Court jury today that not until more than a year after Charles E. Mitchell had sold to his wife 18,300 shares of stock held by the Morgans as collateral, was he told about it.

It was through Whitney that Mitchell in October, 1929, arranged a loan "up to $12,000,000" putting up his National City Bank stock as collateral.

Two months later, to record a loss as a result of which he paid no income tax for 1929, Mitchell sold 18,300 shares of the stock to his wife, without, he has testified, notifying the Morgans.

"General Electric, we hear, has a couple of men in Russia, making contacts to do business."

General Electric, like the Ford Company, has already done "business in Russia," and, incidentally, has been paid in dollars for all goods delivered.

Why this country should refuse to do business officially with Russia, about the only country that is not scheming to keep out our goods, is hard to understand.

MELLON NAMED IN SECOND TAX SUIT

Gulf Oil Head Owes U. S. $5,205,325, New Charge

A second tax suit against W. L. Mellon, president of the Gulf Oil Corporation, was filed in Federal Court today. This time he was sued for $5,205,325.88—twice the amount of the taxes which it is contended he owes the government.

Yesterday Mellon was sued for tax evasions of more than $2,000,000, to which he must file an affidavit of defense within 1 days.

This suit was filed on behalf of David A. Olson, one-time investigator for the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency.

STOCK DEAL ASSAILED

The suit asks for the recovery of $4,000,000—double that of the alleged income evasions. It charges that Mellon was given, from the years 1926 to 1930, inclusive, 73,000 shares as part compensation for his services to the company. The shares were valued at $8,082,526, and the tax computed at approximately $2,020,131. These capital shares, Olson contends, were omitted from the income tax returns of W. L. Mellon during the five-year period.

The suit also charges that $750,000 deducted by Mellon in five successive tax returns of $150.000 each, were improper. Olson averred these were for notes allegedly made out with the knowledge of R. B. Mellon, G. R. Nutty and others, these notes to be recorded on the corporation books. He maintained the notes were fictitious, and made so that the stock compensation could not be set forth in the income tax.

The notes were for $500,000, the petition states.

A. W. MELLON NAMED

Andrew W. Mellon was mentioned in the suit as having held, while Secretary of the Treasury 1,500,000 of the corporation's 4,500,000 shares. Of these, 300,000 were held by the public.

The years the tax returns involved were made, the number of shares, value, and taxable sums follow:

Year	Shares	Value	Tax
1927	20,440	1,938,700	484,175
1928	5,256	657,000	164,250
1929	14,016	2,088,384	522,096
1930	11,680	1,556,360	389,090
Total	73,000	$8,082,526	$2,020,131

Olson, under an old statute, stands to receive half the amount the government recovers.

W. L. Mellon is a nephew of A. W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury from 1921 to 1932 and later ambassador to Great Britain, and R. B. Mellon, banker. Russell, principal attorney behind the case, was formerly counsel for the Federal Power Commission, from which he was ousted.

COUNCIL PLANS SUBWAY PARLEY

Council today authorized the appointment of three of its members to meet with the Transit Commission and the Pittsburgh Railways Company to negotiate plans for a subway.

The commission and councilmanic committee are empowered to determine what use the railways company would agree to make of a subway if it was from Duquesne way and Sixth street to Craig street, Oakland, and what payments toward its cost and upkeep the company would make.

L. W. Monteverde, member of the commission, said:

"If this city is going to progress it must have rapid transit. The governing bodies here have never done any particular favors for the streetcar riders."

He then suggested that such a subway could be built with only $1,750,000 added to the city's bonded indebtedness. This was taken to require the 1919 authorized subway issue of $6,000,000 and the possible $2,000,000 from federal sources.

The councilmanic committee has not been appointed.

2 Injured as Auto Upsets in East End

Mary Sivigart, 20, of 5427 Penn avenue, and Ernest Fontana, 28, of 7232 Tioga street, passengers in an automobile which overturned after hitting a curb in Shady avenue, near Fair Oaks street, were in Pittsburgh Hospital today.

Four other persons in the car escaped uninjured.

NATIONAL G.A.R. CHIEF FOUND DEAD HERE

Succumbs in Hotel After Speech at Convention

Capt. William P. Wright, national commander of the G. A. R., slept on today.

He had attended his final campfire—speaking at the encampment of the state Grand Army last night in Memorial Hall.

He had predicted in his little, stumbling talk that if statistics were right, there would be only two of his old army boys left in 1950—and he said:

"I'll bet I'll be one of them."

But when he failed to reach breakfast this morning at the Hotel William Penn, Adj. Gen. Samuel P. Towne had the bell captain call, then visit his room.

FOUND DEAD

He found Capt. Wright, of Chicago, 88, had died during the night from a heart attack.

In his little talk last night the G. A. R. head said that he had come a day too early and that he would make a complete talk in the morning to the women's auxiliary. But another day would have been too late.

Resolutions were passed at both veterans' and auxiliary meetings today. Little clumps of sparse-framed, white haired old men in the faded Civir War blue sat around the hotel lobby and meeting halls, trying to remember. One said:

"Maybe he was the Capt. Wright from old Allegheny, who refused me when he was organizing his company."

PLANS MADE

Another strove hard, then confessed:

But as a youthful captain, Wright had commanded D Company, 156th Illinois Infantry in the civil conflict. He was born in Naperville, Ill., a suburb of Chicago.

Last September, camping beside the tomb of Abraham Lincoln in Springfield, Ill., his comrades made him their national chief. A month later, he and Mrs. Wright observed their sixtieth wedding anniversary. They have no children living.

Arrangements were being made to ship the body back to Chicago.

Capt. Wright planned to see the installation of officers at the close of the state convention today. He apparently died peacefully in his sleep. On his bed were scattered a few sheets of stationery. His clothing was neatly draped on chairs. His old blue coat, bearing his Grand Army decorations, hung just as he had removed it when he retired.

Deputy Coroner B. C. McTighe said that due to his advanced age, it was difficult to determine how long he had been dead.

A flag-draped vacant chair sat on the dais of the room in the Mayflower Hotel at noon while the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, with their fathers, held a luncheon. One of the daughters sang "The Vacant Chair."

WIFE 'BREAKS' AT BALM TRIAL

What a day this turned out to be in Common Pleas Court!

Mrs. Edward C. Lowe, of 25 Venanga street, was testifying in the $10,000 suit she had brought against Mrs. Sarah Jane Reagan, of 7106 Kelly street, accused of alienating the affections of Mrs. Lowe's husband, a chiropractor.

Mrs. Lowe jerked off her hat, ran her fingers through her hair and from the witness stand, eyeing Mrs. Reagan, she exclaimed:

"I'm just going to get so mad. That woman has robbed me of my husband, my home—everything."

Judge James H. Gray ordered Mrs. Dowe from the courtroom for a few minutes to cool off.

Calmer, Mrs. Lowe told of finding her husband's letters, which she said indicated he had given Mrs. Reagan gifts and money.

But Judge Gray threw the case out of court because of insufficient evidence.

Mrs. Lowe, leaving the courtroom, shouted her opinion of the kind of justice administered.

Prince's Fiancee

SENORITA SAN PEDRO-OCEJO

PRINCE LOVES IN 3 LANGUAGES

LAUSANNE, June 15.—(AP.)—The Prince of Asturias, son of former King Alfonso of Spain, and Senorita Edelmira Sampedro, daughter of a Cuban merchant, have chosen the Catholic Church in Ouchy, Switzerland, as the place for their wedding ceremony, but they have not set the date, which probably will be late in June. The prince, who on Tuesday renounced his royal rights in favor of a brother, said:

"I value my love for my fiancee more than anything else."

He made the remark successively in Spanish, English, and French while he and Senorita Sampedro posed for sound pictures. His fiancee's sister softly whistled "Who Stole My Heart Away?" during the proceedings.

PARIS, June 15.—(AP.)—Former King Alfonso of Spain returned to Paris today as displeased as ever, his friends said, with the projected marriage of his son, the Prince of Asturias, to Senorita Edelmira Sampedro, a Cuban girl not of equal rank.

STATE HIGHWAY PLAN READY

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot says plans for Pennsylvania's $18,800,000 road building program are ready and will be sent to the Federal Roads Bureau at once.

In Washington yesterday for a relief conference, the Governor said this work would be one of the first ways in which the administration's gigantic industrial recovery bill would affect the Keystone state.

He had a long talk with Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the roads bureau about Pennsylvania's share of the $400,000,000 the industrial recovery bill would allot for highway building.

Unknown Air Crash Victim Identified

CHICAGO, June 15.—(AP.)—Partial identification of one of the two unknown victims of last Sunday's plane crash was believed to have been made today when the undertaker found the name "Gallup" in laundry ink inside the man's white duck trousers. The initial "G" was also found on a handkerchief.

Seven of the nine dead were identified soon after the amphibian fell and burst into flames near Curtiss Airport.

TRADE PICKUP PUTS 2,000 ON PAYROLLS

West Leechburg Steel Increases Wages 10 Per Cent

More than 2,000 men will have been re-enrolled in Western Pennsylvania's industry by the end of next week, a survey of the district's plant operations shows. With resumption of 50 per cent capacity production, the Layton plant of the General Refractories Company, near Connellsville, 70 men have been given employment. Full capacity at this unit is anticipated during the summer.

OPERATIONS INCREASED

Steel mill operations in the Pittsburgh district are estimated at 35 per cent, double the percentage of a year ago. Fifteen of 53 blast furnaces were in blast. The Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation by blowing in No. 3 at Aliquippa yesterday now has three out of five operating there, and 2 out of 6 at the Eliza, South Side, plant. Carnegie Steel has 9 of 32 in operation.

Four additional furnaces have been lighted at the Ford City plant of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company. They will be ready for resumption on June 19 and June 29 with a full operation of 10 furnaces scheduled July 5. The working schedule calls for 23 to 25 days a month.

Operation of the new $200,000 coal washer at the Acme Coal Washing Company, Avella, had started, employing 50 men in two shifts.

Manufacture of three transformers costing approximately $150,000, for Boulder Dam and Los Angeles, has been started at the Sharon works of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

FULL-TIME WORK

Full-time operation is being resumed by 10 plants in Blair County within the next 10 days, affecting approximately 2,000 men. Companies announcing a step up in production include:

The Claysburg and Sproul plants of the General Refractories Company, Tyrone and Williamsburg mills of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, the Bare Paper Company, Lehigh Valley Silk, at Williamsburg, and the St. Glair Limestone quarries at Ganister.

400 RECALLED

Four hundred miners are to be recalled by the United States Coal Company, which has ordered its No. 1 mine at Smithfield to be put into operation. This mine has been idle for nearly two years.

The Allegheny Steel Company of Brackenridge, Pa., has announced an arrangement with the American Chain Company, of Bridgeport, Conn., for the Page Steel and Wire Company Division, at Monessen, to fabricate and sell Allegheny metal and Allegheny alloys in wire form. This agreement, the announcement said, will immediately open up new markets for the industry.

Factory employment in Pennsylvania increased 5.4 per cent in May and wage payments rose 13 per cent, the Federal Reserve Bank at Philadelphia announced. Since March, when the state's productive activity reached its lowest level in 11 years, employment has risen 7 per cent and payrolls 19 per cent, the report stated.

NAVY TO BUILD 32 NEW SHIPS

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP.)—A $238,000,000 naval building program intended to put 32 new ships in the water in three years was formally announced today by Secretary Swanson.

President Roosevelt had agreed to allocate the funds out of the $3,300,000,000 public works appropriation and "is anxious to have the work done as soon as possible," Swanson said, adding:

"We will build to the fullest capacity of shipyard facilities. As quickly as possible we want to put people to work at shipbuilding where 85 per cent of the expenditure goes to labor."

4 Million Back on Jobs By Fall, U. S. Aim

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP.)—One-third of the country's unemployed back at work by October is the aim of Gen. Hugh Johnson, the administration's industrial director.

Johnson announced this expectation—4,000,000 men put on payrolls again—in an address last night to a meeting of state relief officials here to co-operate with the government's new relief enterprises.

Simultaneously Secretary Perkins made public statistics of the Labor Department showing May has brought remarkable increase in factory payrolls and employment—the biggest single month's jump since January, 1923, 10 years ago.

Payrolls were up to 11.5 for the month and employment 4.8 per cent, the difference showing increased wage rates or working time for those employed.

Johnson said figures collected by his staff of experts showed industry, under the sweeping new law he will administer, should be able to re-employ 3,000,000 men by fall. In addition, the government's public works program is confidently expected to produce jobs for another million.

The peak unemployment figures have been put at around 12,000,000 by the American Federation of Labor.

POLICE QUOTE FREUD IN HUNT FOR MOTIVE

Novelist Finds Theme Of 'Modernism' Enters Tragedy

(Editor's Note—Elenore Meherin, noted writer, today summarizes in the third of a series of articles the evidence against David A. Lamson, Stanford Press executive accused of the "bathtub murder" of his pretty wife. Lamson's preliminary hearing on the charges was to take place today.)

By ELENORE MEHERIN
Author of "Chickie" and Other Popular Novels.

SAN JOSE, Cal., June 15.—(INS.)—Unless David Lamson confesses, or—unless some startling new evidence is produced—the prosecution will have a hard time winning a conviction against Lamson—charged with the bathtub murder of exquisite Allene Thorpe Lamson in her quiet college home.

No motive has yet been shown.

David Lamson, handsome young sales manager of the Stanford University Press, was to appear for his preliminary hearing this morning. Charged with bludgeoning his wife to death, he has been through two weeks of incredible suffering. Rumors of his breaking have flown about. But he stood today with the simple story told in the first wild hour after his wife was discovered dead in her bath—unchanged. And no acceptable reason offered why this kind, hitherto highly respected Stanford graduate should do the ghastly deed with which he is charged.

FREUDIAN PHRASES

Sheriffs and jail guards have glibly tossed off Freudian phrases. Subtle, intricate human motives, a few years ago understood only by college professors, are now alleged as a reason why David and Allene Lamson goaded each other until a frightful crime, the state contends, was committed.

This is the favorite motive suggested to date by Sheriff William J. Emig for the prosecution: Allene Lamson was a frigid wife. She repulsed her husband. She used subterfuge to escape his advances. He learned accidentally of her ruse and in an ungovernable rage, killed her.

David Lamson is rated by friends as intelligent and understanding. Friends say he was unusuallly deferential to his wife's moods. These friends also state they heard Allene express a yearning for a son.

The whole thing is an obvious piece of guess work. The one bit of evidence being that David and Allene Lamson slept in separate rooms on the night preceding her death. No one knows that they quarreled.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

Will a jury be seriously impressed because a page from Freud is tossed smartly into the case?

The chain of circumstantial evidence against the young husband is said to be complete. If he did not kill her, who did?

Did she fall and strike her head against the faucets? The autopsy surgeons explicitly stated that death could result from accident. But did Allene Lamson fall four times? There are four distinct gashes in the back of her scalp and there is neither blood nor hair on the faucets, authorities claim.

Did a prowler enter the house, unseen by the husband who was within easy calling distance, and kill Allene Lamson?

Everyone seeks a logical motive. But if David Lamson did this thing, there is no logic to it. It would be a mad, abnormal, utterly inexplicable deed.

Fire Starts Few Feet From Crib; Threat Denied

RYE BEACH, N. H., June 15.—(AP.)—The family of James Roosevelt, son of the President, was staying at the home of relatives today as the result of a fire which forced them to move from their summer place.

Flames which started yesterday in an upper story gained headway before firemen from Portsmouth, Rye Beach and North Hampton could bring them under control. Although part of the furniture was carried from the 15-room house by firemen and servants, damage from flames and water was estimated at $5,000.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her 14-months-old-daughter, Sara Delano Roosevelt, were not endangered. Roosevelt hurried here from Boston, where he is in the insurance business, and it was said they would go to the summer home of Dr. and Mrs. Harvey Cushing, of Boston. Mrs. Roosevelt is their daughter.

After the fire there was a report—quickly denied from the White House—that threats had been made to kidnap the child, that a secret service agent had been assigned as a result of the threats, and that the fire might have been intended as a screen for kidnapers.

Stephen T. Early, presidential secretary, said at the White House that Jams Roosevelt had called his father and declared there was "absolutely no truth in the report."

The President's son telephoned a denial to New York, saying "'reports of any kidnaping threats are simply crazy and without the slightest foundation." He said:

'It is true that a secret service man was sent to the house, but it was purely a coincidence. I was making ready to join my father on his cruise up the coast, and the agent was assigned to the house because of my impending absence.."

CLIVES PARTED --BY FEW FEET

LOS ANGELES, June 15.—(AP.)—The Henry Clives are separating—but only by the width of their Hollywood estate.

There was the economic situation to consider, and all, and it was cheaper for Henry to put up a studio building right on the grounds, and Mrs. Clive could keep the residence at the other end of the estate, and everything could be worked out fine without even a divorce.

That was the tenor of the statement made by the wife of the internationally-known artist yesterday when they casually explained why the master of the house was moving to the studio building.

Mrs. Clive, known in musical comedy as Helen Cunningham, married the artist 11 years ago.

ALASKANS KEEP ANXIOUS VIGIL FOR MATTERN

World Flier Overdue 2,500-Mile Ocean Hop From Siberia

NOME, Alaska, June 15.—(AP.)—The hardy sourdoughs of Nome took up another anxious vigil today for Jimmie Mattern, the globe-girdling American, who was overdue from Khabarovsky, Siberia, on the perilous 2,500-mile ocean lap.

The aviator tackled the treacherous water stretch in the face of severe weather on this side, although the winds were not as strong as on Tuesday when he was forced back to Khabarovsk. He left the Siberian town at 3:30 p. m. (Pittsburgh time) yesterday, and was expected to reach Nome in 17 hours—8:30 p. m. (Pittsburgh time) today.

No word came of the progress of his flight since he left the Asiatic coast, but none was expected as he caried no wireless and was traveling north of the regular shipping lanes.

On this side of the ocean last night Mattern faced a six-mile south wind, and some fog with a ceiling of about 1,000 feet, out had an extreme visibility of six miles.

BALBO ALL SET FOR U. S. HOP

ORBETELLO, Italy, June 15.—(INS.)—Unless there is an unforeseen change in the weather outlook, Italy's formation flight of 25 army seaplanes bound for Chicago will get under way at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning, Gen. Italo Balbo, minister of air, announced today.

The planes scheduled to make the formation flight, which will proceed by stages, were taken out of their hangars this morning and floated on a nearby lagoon, while their pilots fueled, oiled, provisioned and checked them, paying particular attention to the compass and radio equipment.

The weather here is now fine, and reports from the North indicate the disturbances over the Alps which have delayed the flight are receding.

Since Gen. Balbo is not superstitious about "unlucky Friday," he has decided to start the planes on their way tomorrow.

Transatlantic Flier Seeks Speed Record

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—Russel Boardman, Trans-Atlantic flier, announced today that he has put a motor developing an additional 100 horsepower in the world's fastest land plane and that he will attempt to break the present land plane speed record at the national air races in Los Angeles next month.

The plane is that used by Maj. James H. Doolittle to set a record of 294.38 miles an hour at Cleveland last year.

Bigger, Stronger Men Predicted by Doctor

'Immunization' Era To Revolutionize Medicine

By LEIGH MATTESON
International News Service.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 15.—The "Dawn of a New Era," in which human beings will be "immunized" against disease and the ravages of living so that they will be bigger and better and live longer, was announced today at the fourth session of the annual convention of the American Medical Association.

Recent experiments by Dr. Clyde Brooks, of New Orleans, chairman of the association's section on pathology and physiology, foreshadow this radical biological improvement of the human race and other mammalian species, he announced.

He said that breeders of food stock, such as cattle, hogs and sheep, can increase the average weight of those animals and bring them to full growth more quickly than under present methods.

PROTEIN INJECTIONS

In one of his experiments he produced a lot of over-sized puppies. In another he developed huge white rate, who life span was greatly increased over the average.

In all cases he obtained these results merely by injecting into the animals minute doses of a protein compound he derived from ox blood. The doses were injected into the muscles or veins.

Many of the vaccines, such as that for typhoid prevention, are protein compounds, but they are "specific," that is, only of use for one purpose.

GENERAL WELL-BEING

Dr. Brooks' new compound, which he calls "hemo-protein," is "non-specific," that is, for use in promoting general well-being. Figuratively speaking, it is general safeguard against all the ordinary emotional and physical shocks of livin in that it builds the body and nerve tissues up to a point where they are not damaged so much as now by those shocks and strains.

The non-specific hemo-protein, however, is also of use in curing diseases.

Dr. Brooks reported that he cured with two injections a man with acute arthritis, who had a knee joint swollen to three times normal size. Inflammation of the eyes, due to run-down body conditions, were likewise cleared up "with dramatic promptness."

Extra Toe, Going? Coming? Doctors Don't Know

MILWAUKEE, June 15.—(INS.)—Discovery that human beings are sprouting or have lost a sixth toe was announced here today at the American Medical Association convention.

Dr. Frederick C. Kidner, of Detroit, made the discovery after operating on hundreds of persons for flat feet.

He found that most flatfootedness is congenital, the individuals being born with a rudimentary sixth toe under the skin on each foot or with a muscular and tendon arrangement to accommodate another toe in each foot.

DODGES FEAR KIDNAPERS

NEW YORK, June 15.—(INS.)—Fearful of kidnapers, Horace E. Dodge, multi-millionaire manufacturer, his wife and two children disembarked today from the Europa in the midst of a ring of private detectives.

Dodge, in refusing cameramen permission to photograph the children, David, 3, and Diana, 1, disclosed that the reason was "these kidnaping attempts and rumors." He did not give any details, outside of saying that he had hired 18 guards to protect the children at his Detroit estate.

The Dodges showed the depth of the fear by keeping the children aboard the Europa long after it had docked until the dock was nearly cleared of baggage and people. Then they were hurried down the gangplank behind a barrier of burly plainclothesmen, placed in the family car and whisked away.

THREE ACCUSED BY YOUNG GIRL

Alleged to have attacked a 14-year-old girl, Joseph Casillio, 25, of 534 Jefferson street, was held in East End Police Station today on a suspicious person charge.

Two other men implicated by Casillio were also under arrest, police said.

The victim told police she had been invited into an auto by the men and driven to the end of Lincoln avenue extension, where the attack took place.

Because of the age of the girl, who is in Pittsburgh Hospital, the Sun-Telegraph will not publish her name.

Tells of Beating Victim To Death to Quiet Her Screams

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—(AP.)—Richard Bach, 23, accused of the mysterious killing five months ago of Rose McCloskey, 19, went back to Fairmount Park today, police said, and re-enacted the slaying.

Officers said Bach, trailed for months, admitted stunning the girl's companion, Dennis Boyle, 30, with a rock, and then felling the girl after she made an outcry.

ACTION PHOTOGRAPHED

Police cameras recorded the action as Bach was taken back to the place where the girl's battered body was found on the morning of January 5, near the bench on which she and Boyle sat on the night of January 4. Bach's words were recorded as he said:

"I crawled up on the gravel hill behind them. I picked up a rock weighing four or five pounds and threw it down and hit the man on the head. Then I ran down the hill and grabbed the girl.

"She started to fight and scream and I punched her in the face with my fists. She kept on fighting, and I picked up a rock and hit her. I dragged the girl away to a tree. She fought more and kept on screaming and I hit her again with the rock."

Realizing he had killed the girl, he hurried home, police quoted him as saying.

CLUE TO SUSPECT

Thomas Barry, 66, a crossing watchman who was in the park with a companion the night of the crime, gave police the clue which led to Bach's arrest.

Barry told police that an exceptionally tall man had followed him and the girl with him, but that they fled. Then their pursuer turned to trail another couple and a few minutes later Barry heard screams.

On the night of last January 4, Boyle was found wandering near the park in a dazed condition, his face and head covered with blood. He lapsed into unconsciousness at a hospital without telling of the attack and the girl's body was not found until the next day.

3RD CONFESSION IN KIDNAP TRIAL

BARNSTABLE, Mass., June 15.—(AP.)—An alleged "third confession" of Kenneth Buck, who with his brother Cyril is on trial charged with kidnaping Peggy McMath, was admitted in evidence today by Judge Edward F. Hanify.

The "confession" was first read at a preliminary hearing at which the jury was excluded and later was presented in court. Chief of Police Emulous E. Hall, of Harwich, who read it, said the statement was made voluntarily.

The "confession" was a detailed account of the crime, from the time the kidnap plans were conceived until the child was returned to her parents on May 5 after payment of ransom.

From the time the child was put in a shack near a cranberry bog in Harwichport, the "confession" indicated, until she was returned to her parents, she believed her abductor was a friend who was shielding her from the real kidnapers. She trusted him and did everything she could to co-operate with him. Not once did she cry.

CONGRESSMAN'S WIFE DIES

HARRISBURG, June 15.—(AP.)—Mrs. Lena Erb Doutrich, wife of Representative I. H. Doutrich, of the Nineteenth Pennsylvania District, died suddenly last night.

Death occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. D. Bailey Brandt, Jr.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP.)—Flags on the House Office Building were lowered to half-staff today in respect to the "death" of Representative Doutrich, of Pennsylvania—and then it was learned it was Mrs. Doutrich and not the Congressman who had died.

The death of the Representative was announced by his office. A secretary later explained she misunderstood while talking over the telephone to Harrisburg, Pa.

Kenneth Romney, House sergeant-at-arms, had started arrangements for an official funeral at Harrisburg Saturday before the truth was learned here.

Two Seek $110,000 In Auto Collision

C. A. Bardolph, of 2815 Penn avenue, was named defendant in two suits for damages filed yesterday in Federal Court by Odell Woodward, of Ashtabula, O., and Miss Dagny L. Thornstrom, of Cleveland. The latter seeks $10,000 and Woodward asks $100,000.

The actions resulted from collision between Bardolph's and Woodward's automobile on the South Ridge road, between Ashtabula and Cleveland, July 15, 1932. Miss Thornstrom was in the Woodward car.

AUSTRIA-NAZI FEUD PUSHED BY BERLIN

International News Service.

LONDON, June 15.—Cheered by the almost unprecedented public support accorded him in London, Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, of Austria, whose government is embattled with Nazi elements, today again postponed his departure to Vienna.

He will leave tomorrow in a private airplane, he announced. He originally was scheduled to leave after his speech before the World Economic Conference yesterday. He will now remain until Dr. Alvin Wasserbaeck, Austrian press attache who has been expelled from Berlin, arrives in London.

BERLIN, June 15.—(INS.)—Going over the head of the Austrian government, the Hitler regime addressed an appeal to the Austrian people today in connection with the crisis resulting from the arrest of Teo Babicht, Nazi press representative in Vienna.

Germany's spokesman was Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Nazi minister of propaganda. He described the arrest of Babicht and the retaliatory deportation of Dr. Alvin Wasserbaeck, Austrian press attache here, and declared that Germany "harbors deepest sympathy for the Austrian people."

Seek to Enthrone Otto Over Austria-Hungary

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—Private cable messages received here today said Prince Sixtus of Parma had arrived at Belgrade, Jugoslavia, as the confidential agent of the French government to win over King Alexander to a solution of the Croatian question in such a manner as to make possible the restoration of the Austro-Hungarian dual monarchy.

The source of this information is close to Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, claimant to the thrones of both Austria and Hungary.

Sixtus, according to the cable information, has been charged with assuring Alexander that Italy fully supports France in the maneuver and that Czechoslovakia also favors restoration of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy as the best means of preventing any plan by Chancellor Hitler of Germany for a union of Austria and Germany.

Upon the success of the Sixtus mission, it was said, depends the fate of the youthful Otto. It was pointed out that Hungary still is a monarchy under a regency.

DORIS KENYON WEDS BROKER

HOLLYWOOD, June 15.—(AP.)—The spindley-legged kid whose pigtails use to arouse in Art Hopkins impulses for mischief today was Hopkins' bride.

Doris Kenyon, contralto concert singer and former motion picture actress, was married yesterday to Arthur Hopkins, wealthy Syracuse, N. Y., real estate broker. They had known each other from childhood.

Only relatives and a few intimate friends were invited to the ceremony, performed in the gardens of her Brentwood Park home, but some 150 acquaintances in the movie colony attended the later reception.

The bride, widow of Milton Sills, screen actor, was attended by her sister, Mrs. Mabel Kenyon Haanel, and was given away by Charles Brabin, husband of Theda Bara, one of the movies' first sirens.

MINISTER FREE IN BEER CHARGE

MUNCIE, Ind., June 15.—(INS.)—The Rev. G. Lemuel Conway, suspended Methodist Episcopal pastor, today was at liberty on $250 bail following his arraignment on a charge of transporting illegal brew.

The former clergyman was arrested at Evansville by prohibition agents when they assertedly found the beer in his automobile. With him was William Patterson. The Rev. Conway said the package of a dozen bottles belonged to Patterson.

ARIZONA REPEAL VOTE OCT. 3

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 15.—(AP.)—Arizona will vote October 3 on the question of repeal of national prohibition.

The special session of the Eleventh Legislature sent Gov. B. B. Moeur today a bill setting up machinery for a repeal election.

He signed it promptly and said he would issue immediately a proclamation calling the special election October 3, in conjunction with the congressional election, to select a successor to Lewis W. Douglas, who resigned to become director of the federal budget.

The Goodrich Order affects 17,000 persons employed at tire plants in Akron and Los Angeles, cotton mills at Silvertown, Ga., and branches scattered throughout the country.

It is effective today, as are the Goodyear, Firestone and General increases. Mohawk's goes into effect tomorrow.

With addition of Goodrich to the list, it is estimated that 52,000 residents of the United States receive pay boosts from the rubber companies.

SUITOR KIDNAPS GIRL, 14

DENVER, Col., June 15.—(AP.) Mrs. Ida Hetzler told police today her 14-year-old granddaughter, Miss Phylis Nickerson, was kidnaped late last night from her bedroom.

The grandmother said she recognized the man who pulled the girl through a window, after tapping on the pane to attract attention, as a rejected suitor. She said she was knocked to the floor by a blow as she tried to rescue the girl and upon regaining her feet saw three men carrying the girl, clad only in night clothing, to a motor car.

Miss Nickerson and her grandmother were occupying the same room, Mrs. Hetzler saying she feared for the girl's safety after she had spurned the advances of the suitor a few hours previously. The grandmother said Miss Nickerson went to the window when she heard the tapping.

EUROPE SCORES IN DRIVE TO END DEBTS

Furthermore, Great Britain has paved the way for a general discussion of the debt situation with a view to drastic reduction by requesting a hearing for a new final settlement.

Although expressing willingness to listen to what Britain may have to say, the President has served notice Congress will have the final word in deciding whether the debts are to be revised.

With the canny astuteness traditional of British dealings in foreign fields, Great Britain informed the President of its intention to pay $10,000,00 and then, after obtaining word of the President's willingness to receive this payment, its chancellor of the exchequer, Neville Chamberlain, announced the payment would be made in silver, which at present prices makes the payment only about $7,200,000 in terms of gold.

Thus, after originally offering to pay nearly 14 per cent of the $75,950,000 British payment, Britain actually will pay less than 10 per cent in terms of gold.

PRESIDENT SURPRISED

This bit of cleverness came as a surprise even to the President. At his press conference prior to Chamberlain's announcement yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt said he was under the impression the British would not take advantage of the silver payment plan in view of the fact that they were paying such a small sum.

In order to ease the way for the debtors to meet this obligation, the President recently sought and received authority from Congress to accept up to $200,000,000 in silver in payment of the debts at a maximum rate of 50 cents per ounce. The present world market price of silver is around 36 cents an ounce. Therefore, the debtor nations make approximately 28 cents on the dollar by paying in silver.

The exchange of notes between the President and the British government regarding the partial payment offer revealed a virtual duel of wits.

Britain endeavored to link up the debts with the World Economic Conference, asserting full payment of the British installment "could not be made at this juncture without gravely imperiling the success of the conference and involving widespread political consequences of a most serious character."

Referring to these assertions in his reply made through Acting Secretary of State Phillips, the President declared he "by no means" conceded the truth of them.

President Roosevelt furthermore was very careful to avoid committing this government to any new debt policy by its acceptance of the partial payments. In fact, he made no mention of accepting the payment in his note to the British government, merely "noting" that accompanying the British note "is a payment of $10,000,000 'as an acknowledgement of the debt pending a final settlement.'"

The only acknowledgement of his willingness to receive this sum was made indirectly in the White House statement made public along with the notes. He said in the statement that "in a spirit of co-operation" he, as executive, noted the representations of the British government with respect to the June 15 payment and in view of that payment he had "no personal hesitation" in saying he did not "characterize the resultant situation as a default."

PARTIAL PAYMENTS

Meanwhile, formal notice was received from Italy and notice was expected from Czechoslovakia of the intention to pay about 10 per cent of the installments due. Both these nations have notified this government informally they intended to make partial payments.

Only one of the debtor nations has met its obligations in full. This is the little republic of Finland, which paid all of its $148,592 installment.

Official notification of Belgium, Poland, Jugoslavia and Estonia's intentions to default were expected at the State Department during the day. Belgium already has notified the department informally of its intention to default. France also has intimated informally it will not pay and officials doubted whether any official notification would be forthcoming.

Britain Regards Old Debt Pact as Dead

LONDON, June 15.—(INS.)—The British government regards "acceptance" by President Roosevelt of her $10,000,000 silver "token" payment on today's $75,000,000 debt installment as admission the Baldwin debt settlement is dead.

This became evident today as British officials celebrated what they consider a victory over the "awkward hurdle" imposed by the debt.

Announcement of the temporary debt adjustment was made by Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain in the House of Commons last night. Britain is making the payment in silver at 50 cents a fine ounce.

Ignoring the fact that the American Congress will have something to say regarding debts, the British are determined to lose no time in hurrying forward with further negotiations.

It is probable that Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, Treasury official, will head the delegation of experts going to Washington within the next few weeks to review the British debt agreement.

The government here hopes this body will be able to arrange a settlement, aided by diplomatic exchanges between Washington and London, but it is realized Chamberlain may have to travel to Washington in the later stages of any negotiations.

How Europe Lines Up At U. S. Pay Windows

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(INS.)—Headed by Great Britain, a dwindling line of European nations staggered to the window of the United States Treasury today to make part payment or acknowledge default on their semi-annual installments of the foreign debt.

The following lineup was indicated:

Nation.	Amount Due.	Payment.
Great Britain	$75,950,000	$10,000,000 (in silver)
France	40,738,568	None
Czechoslovakia	1,500,000	Approximately 10 Pct.
Italy	13,545,438	$1,000,000
Finland	148,592	$148,592
Belgium	6,3325,000	None
Latvia	118,961	None
Poland	3,559,062	None
Rumania	1,000,000	None
Estonia	248,322	None
Jugoslavia	275,000	None
Lithuania	132,091	Doubtful
Hungary	28,260	Doubtful

The United States is expected to receive a total of approximately $14,000,000, or 10 per cent of the total of $143,605,294 due today.

U. S. Wins Leadership Of Monetary Group

French finance minister, was elected reporter to the conference.

Prime Minister Hendryk Colijn, of Holland, who had been suggested as a compromise chairman of the monetary group, was elected to head the important Economic Committee.

STABILIZATION SEEN

American quarters said that de facto stabilization within 48 hours was likely. The French appeared mollified by the prospects for stabilization of the dollar, and there was less evidence of tension in the French delegation.

Meanwhile, speeches of delegation leaders were continuing before the assembly.

Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, of Canada, delivered an address which drew favorable comments from American delegation quarters, as did that of Neville Chamberlain, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, yesterday.

The spokesmen for these two leading customers of the United States both indicated agreement with American credit expansion policies.

Bennett especially fell in line with the American administration's public works program as an important step in the world economic revival. He asserted that "cautious" procedure would not be effective.

Another outstanding speaker of the morning session was T. V. Soong, Chinese finance minister, who caused something of a flurry by bluntly serving notice on Japan that China did not subscribe to any Japanese "Monroe Doctrine" in the Far East.

RUSS RESOLUTION

Meanwhile, the first definite resolution of the World Economic Conference was proposed today by the representative of Russia. It hit discriminations and boycotts.

The resolution, handed to Prime Minister MacDonald, conference chairman, would affect the British and Russian embargos arising from the resentment attending the conviction in April of five British electrical engineers who were tried in Moscow on charges of sabotage and bribery.

Immediate action was not requested. The resolution, intended to supplement the Roosevelt truce on tariff changes, provides that nations "withdraw irrespective of motives underlying them, all legislative and administrative measures already passed by them and still in force having the nature of economic aggression or discrimination against any country, such as special customs duties placed on goods from any country, prohibition of export or import to and from any one country, all special conditions for the same, and boycott of trade with any one country."

CANCELLATION DRIVE REVIVED

By HARRY K. REYNOLDS
International News Service.

LONDON, June 15.—(INS.)—Welcoming President Roosevelt's statement of last night, the British government today prepared a new drive for cancellation or drastic revision of the foreign debt settlement.

The President's suggestion that he would gladly receive a British debt mission to Washington met with a responsive accord here..

It was stated in authoritative sources that if such a mission was dispatched to the United States, it would be headed by Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, who not only advocates revision of the foreign debt settlements but advocates complete cancellation of all the debts contracted after the war.

GERMAN DEBT PACT REACHED

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

GEOLOGICAL MUSEUM, LONDON, June 15.—An agreement has been reached between Germany and her short-term creditors, covering obligations representing nearly $1,000,000,000., International News Service learned today.

The agreement will be signed shortly by representatives of the creditor nations and Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, who negotiated it in his capacity as chief German delegate to the world Economic Conference.

Debt Repudiation Scored by Garrett

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—John W. Garrett, of Baltimore, retiring Ambassador to Italy, returned today on the liner Manhattan and said he would go immediately to his home in Baltimore. Questioned on international debts, he said:

"It is important not to repudiate debts. Once these debts are passed over the act affects all future financial responsibilities as between one country and another."

MacDonald Praises Reporters at Parley

LONDON, June 15.—(INS.)—Speaking as luncheon host to more than 200 newspaper correspondents, Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald today lauded the constructive attitude of the press in reporting the World Economic Conference. He said:

"The world requires careful handling and application of long views rather than belief in miracles."

JAPAN WARNED BY SOONG

GEOLOGICAL MUSEUM, LONDON, June 15.—(INS.)—China will refuse to support a pan-Asiatic movement in the Far East, T. V. Soong, chief Chinese delegate, told the World Economic Conference today.

Without mentioning Japan by name, the Chinese finance minister declared:

"A few people in my country and a larger number in other countries believe Asia has little to fear and nothing to learn from the West.

"They urge us to combine western technique with the low standards of living of the East, and thus capture the markets of the world, excluding western co-operation in the name of Asia for the Asiatics."

CANADA URGES WHEAT PACT

LONDON, June 15.—(AP.)—Prime Minister R. B. Bennett of Canada told the World Economic Conference today that the only way to deal with the vast wheat surplus is by international agreement. He said:

'Primes in (primary) products have fallen lower even than the disastrous level of general commodity prices, and we are now confronted with an accumulation of stocks which we must dispose of by exercising some provisional control over production.

"In the case of wheat the accumulated carryover of 350,000,000 bushels can be effectively dealth with only by international agreements involving a possible reduction of the acreage crop until the abnormal carryover which continues to depress the market has been disposed of."

STABILIZATION DEAL LOOMS

LONDON, June 15.—(INS.)—Stabilization of the pound sterling and the American dollar is near at hand, according to reports widely circulated in the financial district today.

The reports spread as leading bankers and brokers heard the Bank of England was issuing a circular letter containing advice regarding trading in dollars and dollar securities.

While the text of the letter had not been revealed at a late hour this afternoon leading brokers expressed belief it will warn against heavy commitments in foreign exchange pending early important developments in monetary stabilization.

BEER BARREL WAR INDICTS 4

The battle over beer barrels was continued today with the indictment of John A. Friday, Paul J. Friday, Walter F. Friday and Daniel Greene, of the Independent Brewing Company.

They were charged with the larceny of 20 beer barrels from the East Liberty freight yards. Plaintiff was H. M. Fox, brother-in-law of Henry (Young Eppy) Epstein.

Before these charges were filed the Fridays had had arrested two truck drivers, said to have been employed by Fox, on a similar charge.

REED TO DEBATE GLASS ON WAR DEBTS

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—One of the greatest debates of all time was promised today after Senator David A. Reed accepted the challenge of Senator Carter Glass for a discussion of the propriety of scaling down the foreign debts.

The position of both is clear cut.

Reed, brilliant and conservative Pennsylvania Republican, a World War veteran, demands payment or default of war debt installments due today.

The two will clash whenever President Roosevelt sends to Congress any proposal to revise debts downward.

The prospects are for defeat of any debt slashing proposal offered by the administration. Senators Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, and Johnson (Rep.), of California, are bluntly opposed to any revision. Crystallized back of them is a vigorous opposition to even regarding partial payment of any installment by any nation as removing the stigma of the word "default."

'MONEY VERSUS BLOOD'

Glass takes the position that this country made great sums of money out of the war debts. He decries the man who seeks a dollar for fighting for his country. He says:

"I intend, at the proper time, to show that our money was put against the blood of these nations. They had 6,100,000 boys killed in battle after we made their cause our own cause.

'We made fabulous fortunes out of the money loaned the allies. We made them spend every dollar in this country and extorted fabulous prices for our products. Talk of American generosity. It's a sham and a fraud. We didn't manifest it."

Reed takes exactly the opposite view. He feels America poured her money into Europe to help European nations, not this country. He thinks Europe has been ungrateful, and has "dishonored" her promises.

He says:

'What are promises!"

"In the diplomatic correspondence between the British and the United States there is not a shadow of suggestion of inability to pay—no pretense that the British haven't got the money.

"We are now engaged in a farcical performance, writing agreements with foreign nations, when before our eyes lies evidence that they have not kept their old promises.

"Why should we make new promises when they don't keep their old ones?

"Talk of their helping us. Our men, war fleets, money! We gave them victory. They took the spoils at Versailles. We were dragged into the war by Germany's stupidity. They regarded it as incredible luck. They thanked their luck stars.

"They did nothing for us."

COUNTY TO BILL MAN FOR TEST AS DRUNK

George T. Harley, of 132 Brookline boulevard, arrested in the Liberty tubes by a county policeman last August, will receive a bill from the Commissioners within a few days. The bill will be for $5, the fee Dr. J. A. New, of 917 Carson street, charged the county for pronouncing Harley under the influence of liquor.

Dr. New's bill was received by the Commissioners yesterday and was ordered paid. A report attached to the bill told of Harley's arrest and stated that he was convicted of violating the automobile laws in court several months ago, and had been placed on parole for two years. The report stated that the court did not stipulate that Harley should pay the bill.

McGovern directed that Harley be billed for the amount. The Commissioner further directed that if the money was not collected, Harley should be sued before a justice of the peace.

MARION DAVIES' STYLES RULE

Hollywood, perhaps more than any other place in the world, has its eyes focused on fashions that are to come. Every star is eager to introduce something new—but with permanently beautiful quality in the line, treatment of material, or the material itself.

And no star in Hollywood is more alive to fashion trends than Marion Davies, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's leading woman in their new film version of "Peg o' My Heart."

Formal wear is Miss Davies' latest triumph—as witness the furor created by three of her newest gowns.

One is a black and white formality, in which gorgeous black velvet—always distingue—is used for the gown, the short train giving dignity to the line of the skirt, and the high neckline observing the latest dictates of the fashion czars. The capelet jacket, bordered with white fox fur, serves only to accent the gown, a large "double V" fastening for the jacket being exceptionally unique and interesting.

The flattering severity of tailored modes is shown in a suit of crinkled cire satin with a willowy and swagger coat. The white silk pique vest fastens with a row of black buttons. Black and white matelesse gloves have the swastika print design and pleated cuffs.

Everybody knows that Hollywood has gone in for trousers. But how few have realized that this fad can be most distinctly feminine? Miss Davies proves it in the delightful blue and white trouser-suit with which she has captured the attention of Hollywood's most meticulous modistes.

The trousers, of a sailory cut, are of dark blue, and with them is worn a dark blue jersey, topped by a short white coat—of flannel. The double breasted front and three button fastening make the coat particularly attractive—and the whole effect is heightened by a knitted cap of heavy blue and white.

Alderman Sol S. Goldstein and his constables, Jacob Mintz and Harry Kart, were free today of charges preferred against them by Constable P. J. O'Donnell, of Overbrook.

They were discharged by Alderman Jacob Michaels, of Overbrook. The charges were the aftermath of an argument in Goldstein's office, several weeks ago, when a prisoner, arrested by O'Donnell, was taken there to procure bond. Goldstein and the constables were arrested after an information had been filed against O'Donnell in Goldstein's office, the latter said.

You don't have to tell me a thing about "Toasting"

Now, don't misunderstand me. I probably don't know just how the "Toasting" process works... but I certainly know enough about the good it does. To me my cigarette is personal, so when I light a Lucky and taste its fine, pure tobacco fragrance... when I smoke Luckies in any number and still find them cool and mild... do I have to know how "Toasting" works? Frankly, I don't care much... just so long as I can keep on saying—and mean it—"Luckies Please!"

because "It's toasted"

KING OPPOSED FOR MILK JOB

WEST CHESTER, Pa., June 15—(AP.)—Opposition to the selection of Dr. Clyde L. King, chairman of the Public Service Commission, as adviser to Secretary Wallace on milk administration is voiced by the Chester County branch of the Farmer's Protective Association.

The group adopted a resolution to this effect last night. Joseph Cope, treasurer, said that Dr. King, whose ouster from the commission chairmanship is being sought by Gov. Pinchot, would not "work for the interests of the farmer," if he accepts the Federal post.

Advocating a plan by which the distributors would be eliminated from the milk business, Miss Charlotte F. Jones, an attorney who has been a Socialist candidate for various offices, said adoption of the plan would provide a basis for a test case which she offered to try for the farmers without remuneration.

CHILDREN MOURN WOLFHOUND

BILLY BURKE SHEPPARD WITH THE MISSING "NEIDA"

Valuable Pet Lost Here by Hollywood Visitors

If you have, and wish to make two little children in Hollywood, Cal., happy, notify Louis L. Kaufman, Sun-Tele Globe Trotter.

For Neida (that's the dog's name) is the pet of Billy Shepard, 4, and his sister, Sylvia, 2, grandchildren of John Jay Burke. Neida was brought along when Burke's daughter, Mrs. Allen Shepard, came here for a visit. The dog disappeared a month ago from Burke's Squirrel Hill home and the Shepards were forced to return to the coast without her.

Neida is of a rare breed, according to Burke, and worth several hundred dollars. She is a year old and has a good pedigree. One of her front legs was broken, thus causing the limp.

PICKETS ROUTED AT MINES

Several scattered disturbances were reported yesterday in outlying districts as a result of attempts to organize openshop mines. Constables at the Montour No. 4 mine of the Pittsburgh Coal Company in Washington County routed a union picket line when they shouted at non-union miners working there, according to Sheriff J. A. Seaman.

A strike was called and 500 employes of the Crucible Fuel Company's mine in Greene County walked out yesterday, asking recognition of the union.

At Lincoln Hill it is reported that employes of the Lincoln Gas Coal Company have been unable to reach an agreement on joining a "company union" or the United Mine Workers.

HAMMOND, Ind., June 15.—(AP.)—For $20, Lake County has purchased an "antique" bridge 80 feet long, and the price includes a 200-mile delivery haul.

Genuine Rollator Mechanism... Authentic Style

See the Norge before you buy any refrigerator. Styled years ahead in cabinet design, powered with the genuine Rollator, the famous extra powered cooling mechanism originated by Norge, Rollator Refrigeration is packed with modern convenient features and refinements.

The door latch that opens at a touch when hands are filled; the waist-high food compartment, with every corner rounded for easy cleaning; the scientific arrangement of the flat, ribbon-bar shelves; the porcelain shield that fully encloses the self-cleaning freezing compartment; the spring-hinged door that keeps the quickly frozen ice cubes odor proof, are features you can see when you inspect the beautiful new Norge.

Best of all about the Norge is its ability for unwavering refrigeration. No matter how hot the day or how long drawn out the hot spell, the powerful Rollator goes right on making cold, freezing ice and doing it at less cost.

A refrigerator is an important investment and the mechanism is the heart of any refrigerator. Be sure yours has a mechanism that has proved itself. Be sure, too, that its appearance is modern, a style that will be good for its long life-time.

Before you buy, see the Norge. It costs less to own, less to use and will be in use for more years.

Norge Corporation; Division of Borg-Warner Corporation, Detroit, Michigan.

THE ROLLATOR

The genuine, original Rollator was developed by skilled Norge engineers over a period of years. An early Rollator has been running constantly for more than seven years in a room at the Norge factory. That is equivalent to twenty-seven years of ordinary domestic use, and today the mechanism show no measurable wear.

TELL IT TO ELSIE -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By ELSIE ROBINSON

A Mother Shouldn't Give Baby All Her Attention

Hubby has a rival in his bouncing baby boy—and he's actually jealous!

He has a hated rival — a sly intruder who has crept softly into his wifes' heart and pushed him out of it!

So now the Big Boy is "just the Guy Who Pays the Bills"— and he feels that he's just about as welcome at home as a dose of hives.

But what can any man do about a situation like that?

When his hated rival happens to be his own brand-new baby boy, whose ecstatic mother loves him to the exclusion of every other interest on earth, what can he do?

Comical situation? Not so comical to many a distressed young father or many a bewildered young mother. For example, Josie, who just can't see why the Big Boy gets that way.

Dear Elsie:

I have a problem that is just driving me frantic. Will you please help me? I need help so. I am a young mother, married three years, and have an adorable little son just 13 months old. My husband and I were so happy before the baby came, and we looked forward so eagerly to having it that I can't quite understand what has happened to us. But now things are not running smoothly at all.

I hate to say it, but my husband seems to actually be jealous of junior. I don't mean that he isn't fond of him. He is. He is proud of him, too. But he seems to resent the fact that junior needs so much attention from me.

HUSBAND RESENTFUL

And you know a little baby does take up a lot of your attention, especially if he is your first one, and you have so much to learn taking care of him, and are sometimes awkward and slow about it. I take every bit of care of him myself, and, in fact, I just simply can't bear to let him out of my sight, he is so cute and so precious.

We used to go out quite a bit before he came, and we were devoted to each other. Now Tom can't seem to understand that he is big and grown-up and can take care of himself, while junior is perfectly helpless and dependent. So every time I can't stop to talk to him or fuss over him, or can't go to a show in the evening, he gets mad.

Oh, he doesn't say much, but he sulks. Sometimes he hardly speaks to me when he comes home, and if I do try to talk to him, he makes some sarcastic remark about "don't bother with me, I know you have not time for me now," and buries his head in the newspaper.

Honestly, if this goes on much longer I'm going to go crazy. I love my husband, but I think my baby comes first. There are so many things he needs that only I can do for him. What is the matter with Tom? Why can't he understand. JOSIE.

BALANCE THINGS

What is the matter with Tom?

You said it yourself, lady! He resents being pushed aside—and why shouldn't he? He didn't marry you just to get a nursemaid for his youngster. He married you because he wanted your love and companionship, and now that he seems to have lost it he is, quite naturally, hurt—and plain peeved.

"But I must take care of Junior"! you cry.

Surely, Junior does need your care. But Tom needs you just as much, though in a different way. He has just as much right to count, in your eyes, as Junior has—and unless you see that he does count, you're going to lose him.

As a matter of fact, all your fussiness is as bad for Junior as it is for Tom. A baby needs care, but he needs to have time to himself, too, to examine the things around him and learn to depend on himself, and when you hang over him all the time and do everything for him, you're doing him actual harm.

So learn to balance things up, Jo. Learn to be both mother and wife. It'll be good for that youngster to have some kindly older woman look after him now and then while you and Tom step out. And it will be even better for you and Tom and the home you're to build.

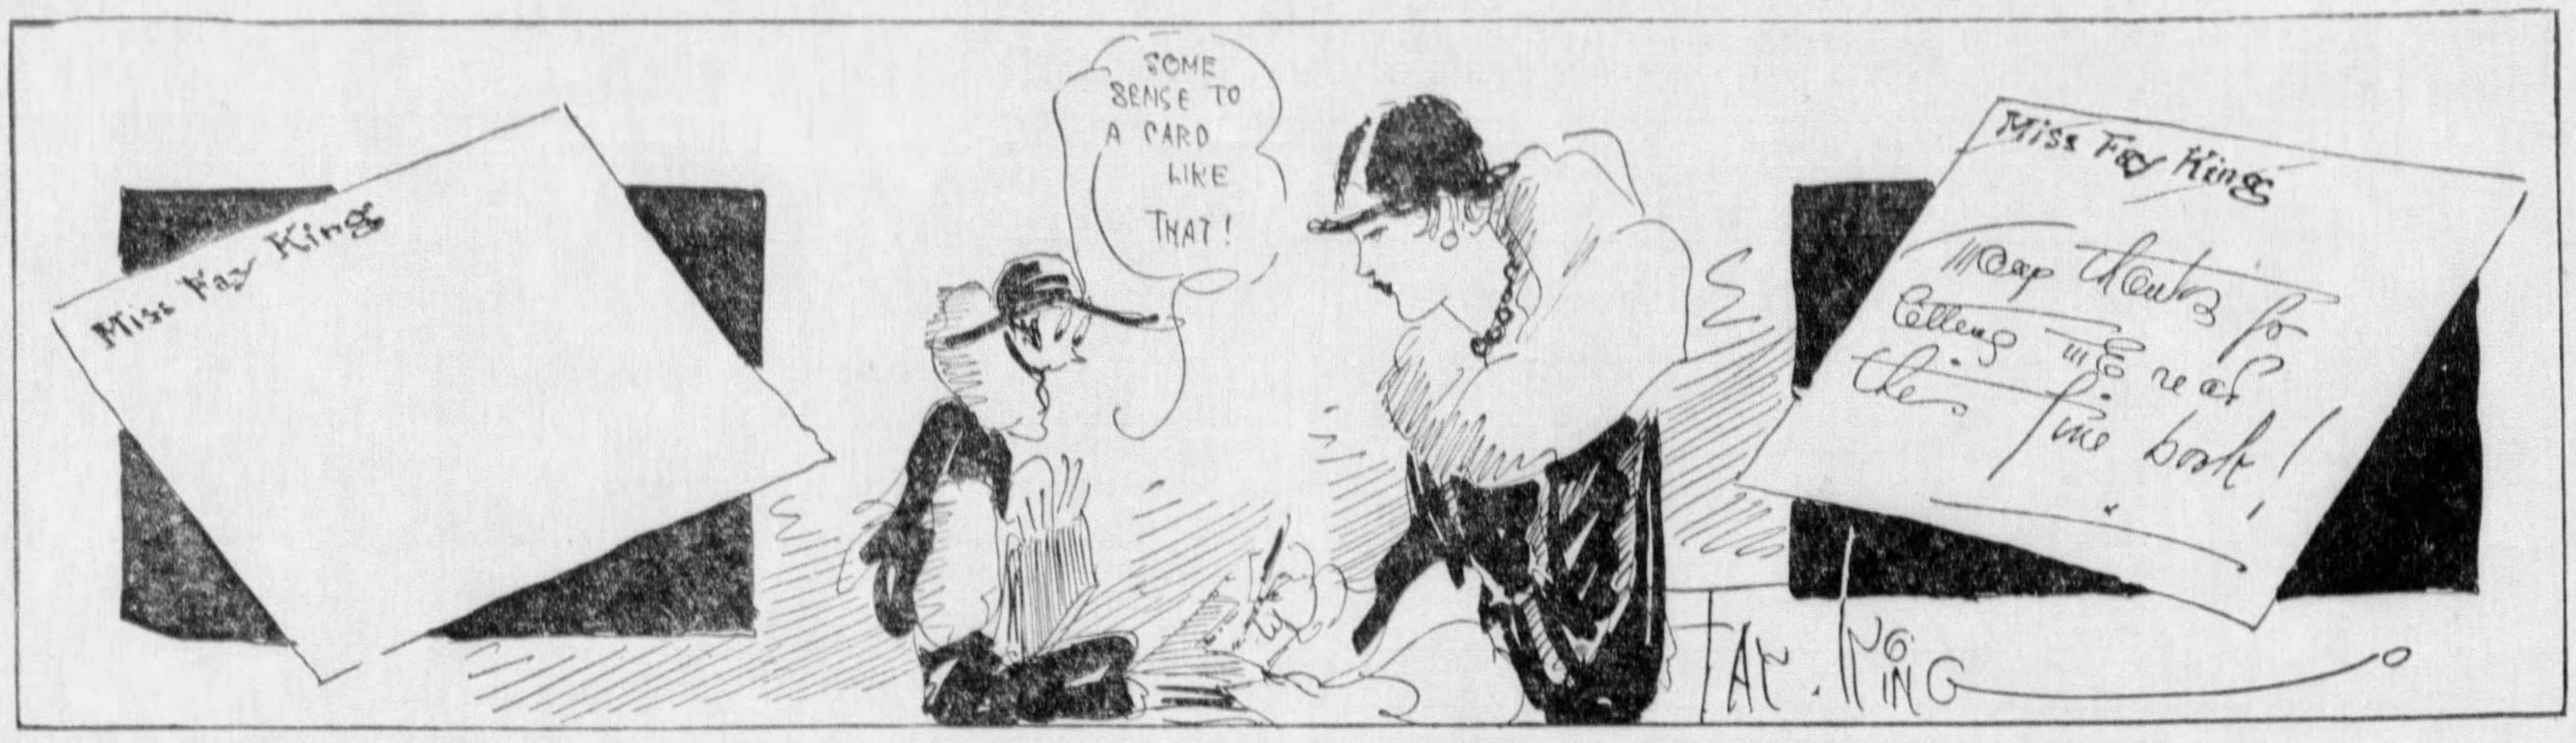
Attention, Ye Card-Makers! Here's a Free Tip From Fay King



Miss Fay King
SOME SENSE TO A CARD LIKE THAT!
Miss Fay King
Many thanks for telling me of the fine book!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

Just before sailing for home in Paris a friend wrote her address on her card and gave it to me.

I had not seen a card like hers before. Her engraved name was placed in the upper left hand corner instead of in the center of the card. This left nearly the whole card for any written message she might wish to put on it.

Remarking on this, she told me that nearly everyone over there uses a card like this, and that there are envelopes for them to use to mail these little card notes.

It struck me that her card was as sensible as it was smart-looking, and if I ever have any cards made I'll have them done like hers.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge, Fleeing, Joined by Marion and Ronald

Forgetting all caution, not remembering for the moment, even the existence of Nick, the gangster, and my probable fate should he find me, I rushed in the direction of Marion's soft call. The next instant her arms were around me, while standing close to her, Ronald demanded anxiously:

"Are you all right? That beast didn't hurt you?"

"Yes, yes. No, no. He didn't hurt me." Breathless with anxiety, I answered both questions at once. "But, children! Why are you here? I thought at least you were safe, and Ronald, you shouldn't be standing, let alone walking. You promised me——"

"I know we did," Marion cut short my reproaches. "What else could we do with that beast right there? But do you think we'd leave you alone. If anything happened to you, we planned that it should happen to us, too."

"But Ronald is hurt——"

"Not too hurt to get around," Ronald said grimly. "Marion's a good first-aider. She fixed me up fine. I'm not bleeding a bit, and I'm feeling a darned sight better trying to do something, even if it isn't any use, than lying over there alone. Why! Do you know, Aunt Madge, Marion would have sneaked off to you by herself, leaving me there, if I hadn't caught on to what she was doing."

NICK'S DISCOVERY

"Hush! Don't breathe even!" I whispered as a savage exclamation from Nick came from the direction of the fence post to which he had lashed my hands, and from which I had bribed Tony to release me. From the instant I had caught Marion in my arms, I had been drawing her stealthily but steadily toward the shelter of the bushes lining the fence, and Ronald, perforce, had followed us, until we were all hidden from possible view, would be, even if the moon should succeed in escaping from the clouds now blotting it out.

And all the time, like a running accompaniment of our colloquy, had come the sounds of motors starting and cars moving. Vaguely I sensed that Jerry's henchmen had departed in their car, and that Nick had turned his around ready to take me with him wherever he might choose. And then had come his discovery that I had escaped.

Careless now, of being overheard, he "emptied the vials of his wrath" upon the nearest object, Tony.

"She's gone!" was his first exclamation, accompanied by such vile epithets and threats against me that I had to hold Ronald fast to keep him from dashing madly toward Nick. My own wrath was at the boiling point, but I knew that our slender hope of escape would be lost if Nick should learn our whereabouts.

"And you, you double-crossing crook," Nick added embellishments here also—"what have you done with her? Come clean. She never got away like that alone. I had her tied too tight. You cut her loose, you—"

DOUBTS STORY

He ran out of breath and epithets at the same time, and we heard the sound of two bodies in combat. Then Tony's voice snarled:

"Keep away from me, or I'll drill hell out of you. I've got you covered, so hold everything. What are you chewing about anyway? I haven't seen any dame. D'ye mean to tell me you were sap enough to leave her tied to a fence post? Serves you right if she has scrammed. If you must have her, why didn't you put her out with a tap on the head? You could have thrown her in the back of the car, and we could be on our way by now. We'd better be getting out at that. It's a pipe somebody helped her scram. That means there's somebody around here that hasn't been counted yet."

A few seconds of silence followed, and I surmised that Nick was digesting Tony's words with the potent aid afforded by the knowledge of a revolver trained on him. But that he was only halted, not cowed, or yet fully convinced, we knew when he said grimly:

"You talk big, Tony, but I'm not swallowing all of it. But I'll give your dope a chance. Come along with me, and I'll find out what the little gal and her friends are doing. If they're not where I left 'em, then you win and they're responsible. But when I get through with 'em!—"

How to Keep Well -:- -:-

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Bodily Changes Speed Up the Blood Pressure

Dr. Copeland

"A little knowledge is a dangerous thing," is an old saying with modern uses. It can be applied to many individuals who have limited knowledge of blood pressure. They get excited out of all proportion to the importance of the symptoms. It happens frequently that an individual in perfect health, has slightly elevated blood pressure. This information causes great worry and unnecessary fear.

Of course I do not wish to give the impression that high blood pressure is a wholly normal symptom. But I do wish to convey to my readers the thought that within certain limits, high blood pressure is in no sense a menace to life. I refer particularly to blood pressure that has gradually increased over a period of years.

In most instances the rise of blood pressure is the result of natural changes within the body. These are called "compensatory" changes and are really necessary in order that the body may continue to function as it should. For example, as we grow older certain changes take place within the heart and blood vessels. These vessels lose their normal elasticity. This leads to an increase in the blood pressure.

When high blood pressure occurs suddenly, or is observed in fairly young individuals, it is a matter of more consequence. Fortunately, such cases are not common.

Increased pressure may be the result of some infection within the body. The teeth, tonsils, nasal sinuses, gallbladder or appendix may be diseased. It may follow some constitutional disease.

It is difficult to tell a person offhand just what should be his normal blood pressure. Age, sex, mode of living and occupation, former diseases and individual makeup—all these are factors. Thin persons are more prone to have low pressure, while stout individuals usually have high blood pressure. Bear in mind that high blood pressure and low blood pressure are not diseases in themselves. They are signs of changes within the body.

There is an old rule that in the average person, the blood pressure can be computed by adding 100 to the age. Thus, if an individual is 30, his blood pressure is usually around 130. But, as with all other rules, there are many exceptions.

For example, one may be told his blood pressure is 140; he learns by reading or by talking with a friend, that his blood pressure should not be more than 130. This disturbs him.

Such slight fluctuations in the blood pressure are unimportant, having little if any significance. Do not be confused by what laymen tell you about your blood pressure. If you are in good health, do not suffer from headaches, dizzy spells or nose bleeds, and your pressure is within the normal limits, there is no need for worry. Keep in mind that fear, anxiety, worry and emotional disturbance tends to increase the blood pressure. Calmness of mind is a blessing.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

When the Hands Fit

Probably the most striking development in Contract bidding within the last year has been the great progress made in the theory of bidding shaded suits. Some players, no doubt, go to great extremes along this line. The general principle governing the bidding of such suits is that no suit should be bid which is not strictly up to bidding standards when the hand itself is a minimum. A logical extension of this principle is that when the partnership finds a fit in one suit with an evident preponderance of high cards, a much shaded suit may be shown on a later round of bidding with the sure knowledge that there is a safe refuge in the biddable suit if partner cannot support the second suit.

An interesting example of the application of this principle to actual play occurred in a recent team-of-four match in a New York club on the hands below:

South, Dealer.

North:
♠K 8 2
♡Q 10 5 2
♢A K 7 3
♣5 2

West:
♠A 10 9 7 4
♡K 8
♣K 10 9 7 6 4

East:
♠Q J 6 3
♡J 7 3
♢J 8 5 4
♣J 8

South:
♠5
♡A 9 6 4
♢Q 10 9 6 2
♣A Q 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♢	1♠ (1)	3♢ (2)	Pass
3♡ (3)	Pass	4♡ (4)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Probably a safe overcall at the range of one, but certainly extremely dangerous, when vulnerable, at any higher level.

2—With only a single stopper in the suit bid by a vulnerable opponent, North is wise to give a Jump Raise to his partner's Opening bid rather than make a bid of one notrump.

3—Certainly a greatly shaded suit, but South cannot bid notrump with a singleton in spades and it is possible that there may be a game in hearts and no game in diamonds. The chance of game is too good to be missed by not exploring all possible roads.

4—North's decision to bid four hearts rather than three notrump is entirely correct. He has no knowledge of the club suit and it is, of course, obvious that three notrump cannot be made as the cards lie.

The contract of four hearts was not at all difficult to make. The Opening lead was the Ace of spades, and thereafter South lost nothing but the heart King.

It is interesting to speculate upon North's chances of making game assuming that he were the Declarer with four hearts and that East made the best Opening, which is unquestionably a club. Of course, the first trick must be won with the Ace in Dummy, and the way to make the contract then requires plays bordering on Double Dummy. A low heart must be led, which West would win with the King. West would then lay down the King of clubs and follow with another club. The third round of clubs North would be required to ruff with the Queen, and thereafter he would have to finesse against East's Knave of trumps. It would be an interesting and spectacular hand, but it is questionable whether anyone would make it except with all the cards spread open on the table.

TODAY'S QUESTION

You hold:

♠Q 5 2 ♡A Q 3 ♢Q J 10 4 ♣A K 9

Both sides are vulnerable. Your partner has bid one spade. What do you bid?

Answer: Three notrump. Although the hand contains 4-plus honor-tricks, it is not advisable to bid more than three notrump, as this is a very strong bid and a mild Slam try. You hold just barely adequate trump support, with every suit doubly stopped, and the notrump response is infinitely preferable to raising the spades.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Announcing Baby

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am soon to become a mother and I want very much to let my relatives and best friends know of the birth of my child. I am to go to the home of my mother for the event, as I live about 35 miles from her and from my doctor.

I want to write these people of the event on a card like the one I am enclosing, but I am very much in doubt as to how I should word these cards, and also I want to let the people know that I am at my mother's home. My friends and relatives live nearer to my mother's home than to my home. Please help me. R.

It would be too difficult to write all of this information on the tiny card that you enclosed in your letter. Instead of using this card, I suggest that, when you are able, you write short notes of announcement. If this is too arduous a task, you can buy some simple, white, brief birth-announcement cards, filling out your name and your husband's name on them, the name of the baby, the date of the baby's birth, and then, in the corner, your mother's address.

Announcement Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to become engaged next month and my sister and girl friend want to give me the announcement party. My sister has no objection to my girl friend giving it, but I would like to know if it is correct for two people to give it, or should just one give it, and if they give it jointly, should both names appear on the invitations? D.

I think that this is a very happy plan for the giving of the announcement party, especially since your sister is so thoroughly in accord with it.

Since the girls are to be co-hostesses, both names should appear on the invitations, your sister's name first.

HUMANE GROUP PROBES 13,000 COMPLAINTS

More than 13,000 cases of cruelty were handled by the Western Pennsylvania Humane Society in the past year, according to the report presented at the annual meeting yesterday.

Agents investigated 610 cases of cruelty to children, involving 1,731, and 57 cases of cruelty to aged persons, involving 66. There were 6,145 cases of cruelty to animals, involving 28,499. Volunteer agents in counties surrounding the Pittsburgh district investigated 4,793 cases.

A tablet in memory of the late Henry W. Borntraeger, an ardent supported of the society, was unveiled at the meeting.

The following officers and board of managers were elected:

President, H. L. Mason, Jr.; vice presidents, Henry G. Wasson and J. Henry Stauff; treasurer, John A. Brown; secretary, W. F. H. Wentzel; assistant secretary, Rebecca F. Duvall; managers, Mrs. William Wallace, Mrs. H. F. Lynch, Mrs. A. C. Groetzinger, Mrs. S. B. Hunnings, Mary F. Urling, Mary C. Over, Mrs. George Reed, H. L. Mason, Jr., William D. Thompson, Albert W. Wallace, Paul C. Wolff, John A. Brown, Henry G. Wasson, J. Henry Stauff, the Rev. A. W. S. Barden, W. F. Struthers and Charles L. McCune.

The abuse of horses in riding schools and the shipping of animals and poultry by truck have created new problems. In less than two weeks during the past summer, 12 prosecutions for abuse of riding horses were recorded. One horse dealer paid a $25 fine.

The heaviest cruelty sentence on record for Allegheny County, a $100 fine and costs plus a year in jail, was given Joe Powloski by Judge Samuel H. Gardner for slashing a Belgian police dog while under the influence of liquor.

SHOWING NEW HAIR METHOD

MISS JUNE YOAKUM HENRI MORIN

Mr. Morin, co-developer of the process with Pitt's Dr. A. F. Jud, professor of analytical chemistry, pictured at Maison Frederic last night as he demonstrated for the city's leading beauty operators and hair-dressers the new permanent wave solution that is mixed to match the individual's. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

The city's leading beauty operators and hair dressers were guests of Maison Frederic, Inc., occupying the entire fourth floor of 207 Fifth avenue, during a demonstration of a new method of permanent waving.

The new method was perfected by Dr. A. F. Judd, University of Pittsburgh professor of analytical chemistry, and Henri Morin, noted haidresser.

Known as the "Viva Wave," the process matches the texture and color of the hair with an individual solution where heretofore only one solution was used. It also prolongs the life of a permanent wave, and eliminates the use of soap during the process, according to Morin.

A COMPANY THIRTY YEARS OLD

This week Friday the Ford Motor Company completes 30 years of automobile making.

It is also my fortieth year at the same job. I made my first engine in 1893, and it still runs. This is the engine that won the Selden Patent Suit---which took the motor car out of the exclusive class, and opened the automobile industry to hundreds of manufacturers who started during the last 30 years.

Some of the men who began with me that June day in 1903, are working here yet. All of the principles we laid down then, are still operative; we find that they have great survival value for the future. To date they have produced and sold over 21,000,000 Ford cars.

Although we created the automobile market we have never thought it was good for anyone to monopolize it. We have always believed that before business could be good for one, it must be good for all. Our discoveries and improvements have always been open to other manufacturers without patent restrictions.

Of course, there is one thing we cannot share---everyone must get it for himself---and that is experience. Money could duplicate our buildings and machines, but it cannot duplicate 40 years of experience. And it is experience that makes a motor car.

But the past does not especially concern me; it has all been a preparation for the future. For myself, I feel that I have just been gathering the tools to do something worth while, and that my real task is still ahead.

Great changes are upon the world. False ideas of every kind are vanishing in the general upheaval. Those who built truly on principle will survive---their service will carry over. Business integrity and commodity honor will be fully justified. And newer and better ways of living will appear.

That is the outlook for this young thirty-year old Company of ours.

CONTEST DRAWS MANY FINE MENUS

What constitutes an appetizing dinner menu?

It is fair to say that there could not be coined another question that would draw as many different answers as the above. This is reflected in the entries already submitted in the Prudence Penny Prize Dinner Menu Contest just launched by the Sun-Telegraph in which $100 in cash prizes will be awarded for the best menus. The contest question that is absorbing the attention of housewives in the reading area of this newspaper is:

"Can four persons be served a well-balanced, appetizing dinner menu at a cost not to exceed $1.50?"

Scores of women readers of this newspaper have already demonstrated, not only by their menus but also by the tabulated costs of the food required in these menus, that the dinners at this low price are in many instances much more inviting than the ordinary banquet.

Who are the women to whom these awards will be made and what will be the arrangement of their menus? There are no statistics available but it is evident that there can be thousands and thousands of dinner menus prepared without any two being identically alike. Consequently the judges in this unique and timely contest see a lot of real trying work ahead of them.

Reports from the leading retail grocery stores and markets already indicate that the housewives of this area are more than keenly interested in the roblem of serving four persons with an appetizing dinner at a cost within $1.50. The Sun-Telegraph contest will tell the story and the women will eagerly watch for the publication of the prize-winning menus.

MANY PRIZES

The list of cash prizes is amply large enough to enlist their enthusiastic and general interest. The first prize is $25, second prize $15 and the third prize $10. TWO MDIVANIS IN RECEIVERSHIP

LOS ANGELES, June 15.—(INS.)—Two of the three Princes Mdivani—whose charm is their "overwhelming self-confidence"—today were in receivership as the result of action brought by Mae Murray, film star, and Mary McCormic, grand opera singer.

D. A. Russel was named to take charge of the interests of Princes Serge and David in various Pacific Coast oil concerns pending settlement of the divorce action brought by Mae Murray against Prince David, and the separate maintenance action brought by Miss McCormic against Prince Serge.

Meanwhile in Paris the third of the Georgian princes, Alexis, was preparing to marry Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress. Miss McCormic said as she filed suit here:

"All three of the brothers are exactly alike. They have the same technique. They are overwhelmingly self-confident. They are audacious in their faith in themselves. They have plenty of charm. They have poise. They are well educated and have traveled in various parts of the world. Then, too, they all have a lot of luck."

PAROLE STAND DEFENDED BY GARDNER

Judge Samuel H. Gardner today answered charges that he had been over-lenient in holding out prospects of quick parole to two former justices of the peace and two former constables who pleaded guilty to collecting costs from the county on fictitious cases.

The four are now serving one-year jail terms. Judge Gardner, in sentencing them Tuesday, told them he would consider paroling them after four months if they made substantial restitution. Maximum possible sentence was two years.

The men were former Justice Walter I. Wickline and Constable Albert O. Streett, of McKees Rocks, and former Justice Fred W. Roll and Constable John M. Fiebig, of Glenfield. They cheated the county of about $10,000.

Gardner said::

"The men pleaded guilty and saved the county the costs of a trial. We had the proof, but we would have had to prove each count and that would have been tedious and expensive.

"I wanted to hold out some incentive for them to repay the county, too. If I gave them the maximum sentence, there would be no reason for them to feel like repaying the money.

"Maybe it was an error in judgment, but I tried to save the county money.

"One of the men, too, is the sole support of an 87-year-old father and an 83-year-old mother. Another is sole support of some small children. You've got to consider all those things."

Civil actions against justices of the peace and aldermen to recover money obtained through phantom cases have been ordered by the County Commissioners. Yesterday they directed County Solicitor J. P. Fife to start proceedings. Each justice of the peace is bonded for $10,000, Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher informed the Commissioners.

FIGHT COMPANY MINE UNIONS

A protest against "company unions" of coal mines was wired to President Roosevelt last night in form of a resolution adopted by a district convention of the United Mine Workers of America.

The resolution was unanimously adopted by the 256 delegates representing 39,000 organized miners at their meeting in the Moose Temple auditorium.

It is claimed that the companies named in the resolution are attempting to evade the provisions of the National Recovery Act by forcing workers into the "company unions."

P. T. Fagan, district president, and Philip Murray, international vice president, were given power to negotiate with operators in the Pittsburgh district in an attempt to stabilize the industry in accordance with the provisions of the Recovery Act.

Among those listed in the resolution as having "company unions" are the Pittsburgh Coal Company, the H. C. Frick Coke Company, National Mining Company, Vesta Coal Company and the Bethlehem Mines Corporation.

'One-Eyed Connelly' Wins $200 With McNamee as Stooge; Chief's Uncle Replaces Wynn

By AIRCASTER

The night was sultry and Times Square sweltered, but the shabby fellow with the lop-sided and peaked cap had the collar of his thin coat turned up.

He had the aimless shuffle of the Broadway bum, but he was obsequious and soft-spoken as he approached Graham McNamee, bound from a cab to join the Ed Wynn broadcast. He said:

"Carry your bag, sir!"

It wasn't a question, and before McNamee could speak, the nondescript had seized the announcer's luggage and was preceding him into the lobby.

They passed the ticket-taker, and 400 radio fans awaiting the broadcast heard him gasp, as the stranger removed his shoddy cap. McNamee cried:

"Migosh, I know you—you're One-eyed Connelly, the gate crasher"

"Yep, and I won a bet of $200 bucks by getting 'n here without an Annie Oakley."

The Chief's Vacation

It seems that Victor Moore has landed the job as Ed Wynn's substitute for the summer—and the program change will result in a ceaseless build-up for Wynn, while he's off the air.

Moore will take the character of the uncle about whom Wynn forever talks. Uncle Vic will do his stuff in a village fire house, the episodes being built around the Chief's vacation.

There'll also be a swede character, played by Wamp Carlson of the Jesters; and a 9-year-old lad, a discovery of Victory Moore lad, a discovery of Victor Moore Graham McNamee will stooge as usual.

They tortured 15 motor cars . . . TO MAKE A BETTER FUEL

DAY after day, last August, a score of engineers lashed cars up and down one of the toughest roads in the Allegheny Mountains. The men represented thirteen great automobile and refining companies, a scientific research society, a famous university. They were pooling their knowledge in one great experiment . . . and when they got through, more was known about what actually goes on inside an engine than had ever been known before. ATLANTIC engineers shared in this experiment. They confirmed their belief in the supreme quality of ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH. But the discoveries which were made gave them clues for further improving this fine fuel. For months they have been carrying on research . . . in the laboratory and in the engines of the 1200 Atlantic trucks and passenger cars from Maine to Florida. They have experimented with new crude oils, new equipment. And at last they have produced a powerfully better motor fuel . . . a NEW WHITE FLASH!

SOMETHING NEW under the Hood

You step on the throttle, and pull ahead of other cars as though they were part of the landscape. ▾▾▾ You go zooming over hills with an ease that makes you wonder if some one has given you an extra cylinder or two. ▾▾▾ You drive for miles and begin to think your gas-gauge needs fixing . . . it shows so little fuel consumed!

Yes, there's something new under the hood. A new kind of motor fuel . . . the NEW ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH . . . which takes you places more smoothly, powerfully, and economically than you've ever gone before.

JUVENILE COURT SHAKEUP URGED BY LEAGUE

WOMEN VOTER'S SEEK TO OUST 'RACKET'

Free Wards of Politics, Probers' Report Recommends

Recommendations that the probation and home finding departments of Juvenile Court be weeded out immediately and that these departments be separated from politics are contained in a report submitted by the Allegheny County League of Women Voters, detailing the results of an independent investigation of 162 foster homes.

The report agreed in many ways with the investigation made by three women investigators working under Leo A. Riordan, chief county investigator. Riordan's report stated that approximately 33 per cent of the 240 homes investigated were unsatisfactory, while that of the league placed the unsatisfactory homes at more than 30 per cent.

While the league report did not mention any cases of brutality or mistreatment, a number of cases which reflect on the alleged inefficiency of the court workers were disclosed. Many cases of bad health, poor food, unsanitary sleeping quarters were reported.

JUDGES TO GET REPORT

One case which brought comments from all three County Commissioners was that which stated the Juvenile Court workers had placed a Negro youth in a white foster home with several small girls. Mrs. J. O. Miller, spokesman for the league committee, stated that this condition had been changed after she personally complained to Juvenile Court.

A copy of the league's report will be sent this week to Juvenile Court Judge Benjamin Lencher and his five associate judges of the County Court. The appointment of the court workers are made by the County Court judges.

After hearing the report, Commissioner W. D. Mansfield pointed out to the women that on December 31, all the present court workers will be out of their jobs. He said that under the new Juvenile Court bill, the new Juvenile Court judge will have the sole power to appoint his probation and home finding officers. This will take the appointments out of the hands of the County Court judges and place the responsibility on the one man. If the new judge cares to, he can reappoint the present court workers, Mansfield pointed out.

TRAINED WORKERS URGED

The committee which made the investigation was composed of Mrs. Miller, Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, Mrs. Frank A. Bond, Mrs. Frank O. Graham, Mrs. A. H. Bowman and Mrs. E. H. Demmler. Mrs. Bond stated that while making her investigation she visited 50 homes in one month, working three days a week.

The report stated that the county was paying sufficient and fair salaries to the probation officers and that the county should be entitled to men and women with college background and trained in social service work. The league recommended that only trained social workers be employed.

The report further recommended personnel of the court workers should be "weeded out immediately and with a ruthless hand."

Stating that many children had been found to be suffering from bad dental, eye and general physical conditions, the league recommended the establishment of a clinic or the use of already established clinics for periodic examinations of the wards.

GUARD AGAINST 'RACKET'

It was further recommended that no wards be placed in the home of city, county or state employes. Regarding this recommendation, the report states:

"We have found children in the homes of school teachers and policemen, and undoubtedly a closer and more accurate survey would show children placed in homes of other types of city, county and state employes. Our reason for making this recommendation is that in case the home was found unfit, it would be most difficult to remove the children from this home owing to political pressure that might be brought, and that tends to make a 'racket' in foster homes."

The report criticized the plac-

Pinchot Puts Brunt of Relief Cuts On G. O. P.

By MARK SHIELDS

Mr. Shields

HARRISBURG, June 15.—A. K. Oliver and John F. Casey, when they came to Harrisburg to appeal from the decision of the State Emergency Relief Board cutting allocations to counties 20 per cent encountered some of the political strategy which dips into relief affairs.

They discovered as a fact of record that the cut had been made at the instance of Auditor General Frank Baldwin and Speaker Grover Talbot of the House, two leaders of the Republican organization. The cuts were made against the announced objection of Gov. Pinchot.

While it is more than probable that the board will eliminate both Allegheny County and Philadelphia from the cuts, permitting each to receive the same proportionate sums which have been allocatd, the political story back of the episode of the reductions indicates that the Pinchot administration has not lost its cunning.

* * *

Organization Showing No Gain in Acumen

Contrarily, the organization has not gained any new brilliance.

In view of the drains on relief funds it was realized some time ago that reductions probably were inevitable. But Gov. Pinchot saw that there was political dynamite in that accomplishment. Families on relief whose allotments are reduced will place the burden on the board heads responsible, and may remember the experience when it comes time to go to the polls.

Mr. Pinchot, if he is a candidate for the Senate, wants no punitive memories of that kind.

The Governor prepared for the situation. Through an aide he adroitly sold the idea that the work of the board should be split up among committees. The committees will have to bear the burden for any criticism which may arise.

At a board meeting a short time ago a motion was made for the creation of these committees. It was adopted. Then Lieut. Gov. Edward Shannon, the idea having been put in his mind by the Pinchot administration, moved that Baldwin and Talbot should be the committee on allocations, with Shannon and State Treasurer Charles A. Waters the committee on personnel.

The last named committee has little more than perfunctory duties to perform.

But Baldwin and Talbot, the Auditor General particularly believing that relief has already been overdone, and incapable because of his rural environment of visualizing the situation in the great industrial centers, brought in the recommendation for cutting allocations 20 per cent.

* * *

Waters Says Pinchot Shifted Burden

Mr. Pinchot knew as well as he could know anything in advance, that they would do so. He opposed it vehemently, which was a popular thing to do. Waters, saying he would vote with the committee because it had been charged with a job, but asserting that the Governor also was actually for cuts and was seeking to shift the burden, had some caustic comments.

He could see the political implications, though what went on in the board meeting has not before been printed.

So the cuts went through, with Baldwin, Talbot and Waters voting aye, Pinehot no, and Shannon merely present. Now, when communities come in and protest their cuts, Mr. Pinchot can say he was against them, but was voted down by the trio of organization Republicans, led by Baldwin and Talbot.

And Gen. Shannon, a potential candidate for Governor, favored by Pinchot as well as by some organization heads, can say he didn't vote for the reductions.

But the Republican organization must bear the burden for the slices.

It is all a very pretty piece of political strategy, and was carefully worked out a week prior to its enactment by the Governor. Speaker Talbot and Baldwin did not realize the fast one which they were walking into when they became the committee on allocations.

Waters did, and that is the reason he will fight the cuts in the industrial centers, a battle which will be decided late this afternoon after Mr. Oliver and Mr. Casey have made their protests.

GRAND JURY'S VOTE FRAUD RETURN DUE

Rumor of Indictments Follows Arrival of Ace U. S. Attorney

The first return of the Federal grand jury conducting the investigation of election fraud charges is expected tomorrow. The rumor started soon after the arrival from Washington of Harry Barger, one of the ace attorneys in the Department of Justice.

Government attorneys have started investigation of reports that certain persons have approached witnesses summoned before the grand jury and coached them as to how they should testify. During the examining of witnesses yesterday a summons was served on Howard Cahill, of 553 Protectory place, a city fireman. He was taken before the jury.

Special Prosecutor Earl F. Reed denied reports of receiving threatening letters since placed in charge of the election probe. He admitted having received "warning" letters. He did not divulge their contents or explain the nature of the warnings.

United States Attorney Louis E. Graham and his first assistant, James I. Marsh, and Attorney Reed conferred before and after grand jury sessions yesterday with the Washington attorney and are believed to have discussed the drawing of the contemplated indictments.

When the jury convened this morning it began hearing witnesses summoned from the Sixth District of the Third Ward. The inquiry involves the election of Congressmen in the Thirtieth and Thirty-second Congressional districts. Mrs. Anne E. Felix is contesting the election of Michael J. Muldowney in the latter district. Twing Brooks defeated Edmund F. Erk in the Thirtieth District.

HERRON AGAIN FLAYS MALONE

Tacit indorsement of the regime of Harry Feldman, a city assessor, as chairman of the Fifth Ward was given by Mayor John S. Herron last night at a meeting of political workers and leaders in the Pythian Temple, 2010 Wylie avenue.

Feldman was the "Kline chairman" of the ward and has been the center of ward disturbances aimed at his removal.

Herron, denying that he was making a "campaign speech," cautioned the workers against a campaign upon patronage promises. He had a few remarks about James F. Malone, resident of the ward and candidate for Mayor. He said:

"As I said before, I don't believe he's going to be a candidate—for Mayor, at any rate. He may be a candidate for some other office. Over the radio Malone agreed to be for everything but the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., June 15.

Will Rogers

President Roosevelt has been breaking his neck to get Congress "off the Potomac" before Thursday, (the day the debts were due). He was afraid to have 'em there when the bad news arrived. He was afraid they would commit suicide.

See where some American heiress gave as her reasons for marrying one of this mess of Mdivanis, that he was "smart, cute, amusing, interesting, and hangs around all the time." Sounds almost like the recommendation of a good setter pup.

Everyone at London says "something must be done" and it looks like it will be us.

PASTORS FIGHT RELIEF SLASH

Protesting the reduction of 20 per cent made in state relief grants, the joint committee on the social crisis today had filed complaint with the members of the State Emergency Relief Board, according to John C. Weaver, of Kingsley House, secretary of the committee.

The committee includes a score of prominent civic and welfare heads. The protest was signed by the Rev. Robert E. Hudnut, pastor of Bellevue Presbyterian Church, chairman; the Rev. Thomas F. Coakley, of Sacred Heart Church, and Rabbi B. B. Glazer, of Rodef Shalom Synogogue, vice chairman.

When A. K. Oliver, chairman of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board, and John F. Casey, a member, appear before the state board in Harrisburg today to protest a 20 per cent cut in the state relief appropriation, they will carry with them the demand of the Unemployed Citizens' League for a 20 per cent increase.

ROBBED OF TIRE UNDER THREAT

Rolling a tire he had just repaired in Wylie avenue to a nearby filling station for air early today, Ecris Robinson, of 702 Francis street, was startled when a man called out to him:

"Hey, you, where you going with that tire?"

Robinson said he answered:

"I'm going too fill it with air."

The man in the automobile retorted:

Robinson complied and the stranger drove away.

Vice Presidents Too Numerous In Big Concerns

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Massachusetts ain't sure whether it's a stein song or a mug ballad. However, it pulled the eleventh leaf off that thirty-six layer artichoke.

One million brand new dinner pails gleam and rattle in federal construction work in July's hot sun. That breaks up five hundred thousand billiard games.

New government law makes your bank deposit as safe as a toad in a glacier. National banks can no longer sell securities. Now it's Morgan's turn to sit in the midget's lap.

Another thing we have learned about old age security. You cannot get rich with another man counting your money.

Club Council Urges Pensions for Blind

A state pension for the blind today was being advocated by the Inter-Service Club Council of Pittsburgh.

Arguments in favor of the pension were presented at a meeting by Frank W. Main, Francis A. Keating and H. Randolph Latimer, executives of the Pennsylvania Association for the Blind. An amendment making it legal for the Governor and Legislature to authorize the granting of such pensions will be on the ballot next fall, it was announced.

Whitman, subdued by John Meuse, was arrested. Marie also was detained. Both will be given a hearing in Morals Court. The Edwards sisters live at 225 East General Robinson street.

At that time arguments will be heard on the validity of the plaintiff's claim, and on whether additional testimony shall be taken as to the amount of stock involved and the amount attorney fees.

CRASH DELAYS GOODWILL TOUR

Pittsburgh's Chamber of Commerce goodwill tourists were held up today at Wheeling, according to an Associated Press dispatch, when the motor bus in which they had toured Southwest Pennsylvania and Central West Virginia crashed into a brick wall in a parking lot.

None of the Pittsburgh delegates were in the bus when the mishap occurred.

The bus was not seriously damaged, but the wall, according to the dispatch, was toppled into an alleyway. The delegates were entertained at luncheon as guests of the Wheeling chamber. Stops were made yesterday in Washington, Waynesburg, Morgantown, Fairmont, Grafton and Clarksburg. The tour was scheduled to return to Pittsburgh today.

HOME OWNERS' RELIEF AGENCY TO OPEN HERE

Pittsburgh home owners will benefit from the Roosevelt mortgage relief bill just as soon as an agency for the newly authorized Home Owners Loan Corporation can be set up here, it was revealed today by Ralph H. Richards, executive vice president of the Home Loan Bank.

Individual loans will not be made through the bank, which was created last October by special legislation. The Home Owners Loan Corporation will function as a separate institution.

Explaining the difference between the two, Mr. Richards pointed out that the bank loaned only to building and loan associations, savings banks, insurance companies and other large holders of home mortgages entitled under the law to membership in the bank. The corporation, he explained, would bring direct relief to individual home owners in four classifications.

FOUR WAYS FOR RELIEF

These are as follows:

1—With the consent of the mortgagee, who will agree to accept a 4 per cent bond in lieu of the mortgage, the corporation will take over the encumbrance up to 80 per cent of the value of the property, limited to not more than a four-family dwelling. The limit of the mortgage is $14,000. The 4 per cent interest on the bond is guaranteed by the federal government, and the owner agrees to pay the corporation 5 per cent interest on the mortgage.

2—If the property is unencumbered, the corporation may advance cash up to 50 per cent of the value, not to exceed $20,000, for the payment of taxes, improvement and maintenance. The owner pays 5 per cent on this mortgage.

3—If the property is encumbered and the mortgagee will not agree to take a 4 per cent bond and the owner cannot get a loan anywhere else, the corporation may advance cash up to 40 per cent of the value, not to exceed $20,000, but the owner must pay 6 per cent interest.

MAY BE REDEEMED

4—If the property has been foreclosed, or voluntarily surrendered to the mortgagee, bonds may be exchanged and cash advanced to redeem the property, providing the foreclosure has taken place within a two-year period.

The corporation, under the new legislation, is authorized to issue $2,000,000,000 in bonds, bearing 4 per cent annual interest. These are not to be government bonds, but the interest is guaranteed by the federal government. Main offices of the Home Owners Loan Corporation will be located in the United States Department of Commerce in Washington, and managers and agents will be appointed in every state.

The corporation is authorized to exchange bonds and take up mortgages for a period of three years.

DETROIT BANK PROBE PUSHED

DETROIT, June 15.—(AP.)—The story behind Michigan's closed banks—and particularly those in Detroit which have not reopened—continued to unfold today as State Banking Commissioner Rudolph E. Reichert resumed the stand in the grand jury hearing being conducted by Judge Harry B. Keidan.

Yesterday Commissioner Reichert, first witness of the hearing, traced the deeply rooted causes of the Detroit banking crisis back more than two years to March 12, 1931, when the American State Bank closed.

Reichert indicated that he believed at least a part of the trouble which caused the closing of the two large Detroit banks—the First National of Detroit and the Union Guardian National Bank of Commerce—[illegible] the American State closing.

The Detroit Clearing House Association, Reichert recalled, guaranteed American State Bank depositors every penny of their money, but in so doing he said he believed the structure of other institutions was weakened.

Pittsburgh [illegible] Tells Amazing [illegible] Story

Joseph Chresia, well-known citizen of 234 Jamaica Ave., N. S., said recently: "As far back as I can remember I have been taking 'The Family Physician' Medicine. My mother wouldn't be without it. I have used it to quickly end coughs, colds, sore throats, fevers and many more serious ailments and got swift positive benefits. A sore throat or ordinary cold is broken by 'The Family Physician' Medicine overnight.

"I remember one of the youngsters was taken badly sick. My mother gave him 'The Family Physician' Medicine. On the doctor's arrival she showed him the bottle. He looked at it, then tasted it and said: 'Keep on using it. I couldn't give you anything better.' I have never ceased to recommend it for children and adults, too, and I never will."

'The Family Physician' Medicine saves hours of anxiety and heartache—nights of horror and suspense in breaking colds, congestion, sore throat and fever. And it's so swiftly soothing to the membranes, so quick to cleanse little bowels and sweeten tiny stomachs. Don't be without it another day, mother. Get a bottle (only 30c or 60c) from nearest Mayflower or Sun Cut Rate, or, better still, see the special representative at Sun Cut Rate, 211 Diamond St., and he will explain this wonderful old medicine that has been a blessing to mothers for 68 years.

ing of small children in homes where the foster parent was of advanced age. One or two cases were pointed out to show that women of 70 and 75 had been given custody of small children for whom they were unable to properly care.

Mrs. Miller said that in a home in Wilkinsburg it was discovered a woman of 78 years was foster mother to a 14-year-old boy. The house was in "filthy and squalid" condition and the aged woman kept a goat in the kitchen. The child slept with a 50-year-old deaf mute, son of the foster mother.

ASYLUM OPPOSED

The league recommended the setting up of an employment bureau to find positions for boys and girls who, having reached the age of 16 years, leave the custody of the court.

The final recommendation of the league was extremely disappointing to Commissioner C. M. Barr. The league opposed the building of any kind of institution for wards until a proper home finding department has been given a chance to demonstrate its usefulness. Barr on several occasions has suggested abandoning the home finding plan and putting the children in the cottage plan of institution. The league pointed out that such an institution would always be in danger of political job seekers obtaining positions which should be filled by trained workers.

She is Miss Marion Ethel Clause, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Clause, of Allentown, who on June 24 will become the bride of Dr. Richard Bruce Cuthbert, Jr., son of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Richard Bruce Cuthbert, of Mt. Lebanon.

Dr. Cuthbert is a grandson of the late Rev. Dr. Charles L. E. Cartwright, a collateral descendant of the historical character, Peter Cartwright, a circuit rider, who had many an altercation with Abraham Lincoln, and who is mentioned in the story of Anne Rutledge.

The ceremony is to take place at 4 o'clock the afternoon of the twenty-fourth in the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church in Brooklyn, N. Y. The Rev. Dr. Cuthbert, who is superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Hospital Home for the Aged in Mt. Lebanon, will be the officiant.

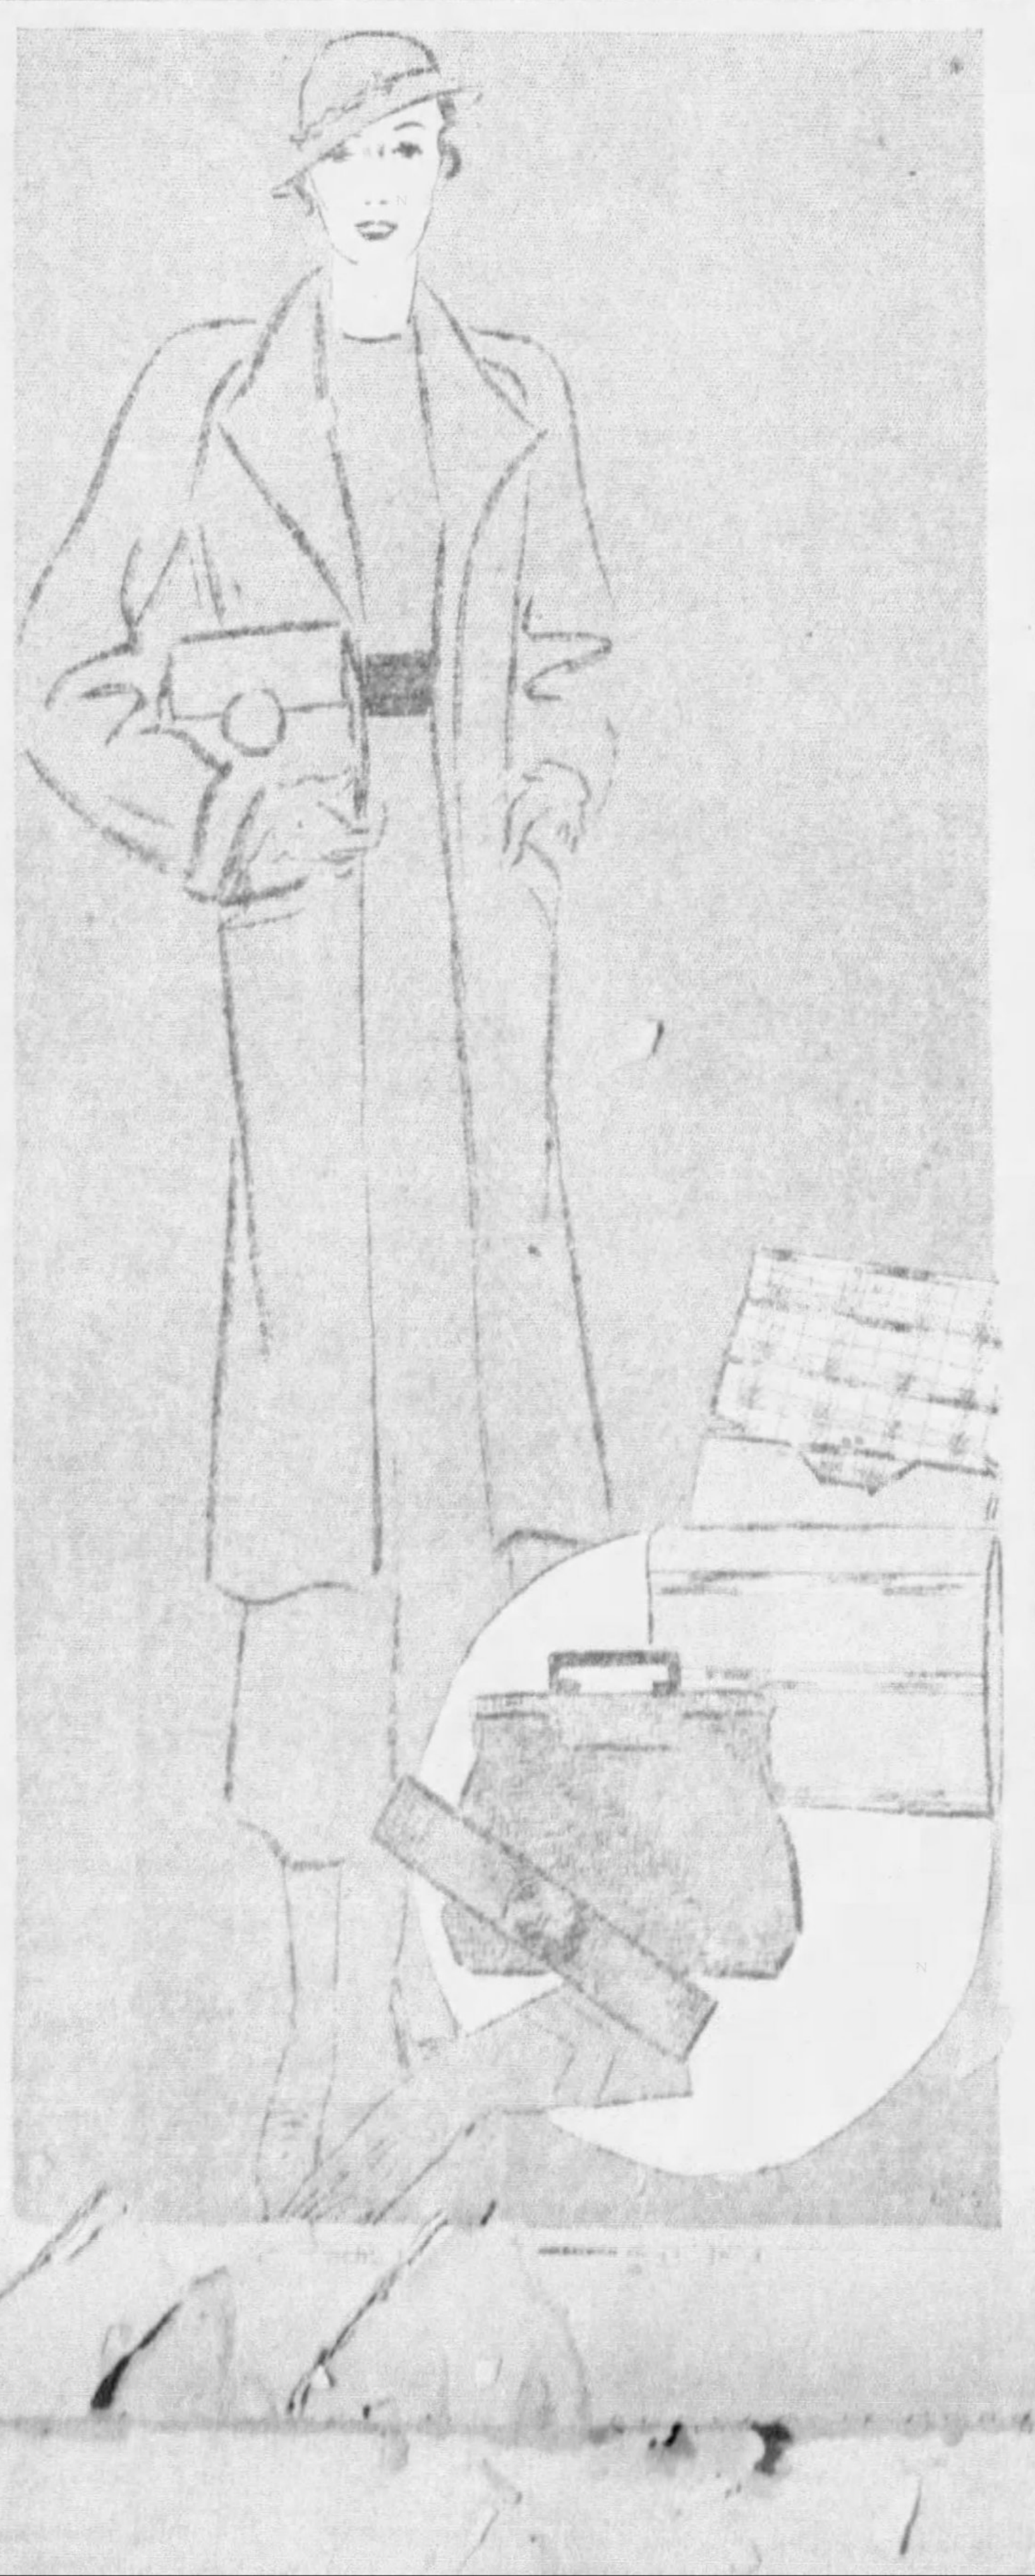
THE DISTINCTIVE COSTUME IS ACHIEVED BY ACCESSORIES



IF YOU'RE terribly busy, and almost every woman nowadays is terribly busy, you may not be able to give as much time as you should to your clothes. It's more than likely that you'll dash out to buy them in a fearful rush. Fortunately, the stores are more and more equipped to handle your case. They supply you, nine times out of ten with clever saleswomen who grasp what you have in mind and find it for you. But then the shock comes when you find that your best friends have tumbled for the same dress. What to do?

* * *

OBVIOUSLY YOU can't toss the dress into the waste basket. The one sure way to keep your individuality, however, legion your dress may be, is through accessories. Start off, of course, with the little white pique sets which look so becoming and wash flawlessly. But your friends will do that too. It's too easy. You must fare farther afield.

* * *

YOU'LL FEEL absolutely triumphant the day you discover burlap (berlap, the manufacturers call it). It looks like burlap, has that nice rustic way about it, but happily, it hasn't the rough and ready hempy feeling which would scratch, scratch, scratch, until you are raving mad. The coat of it shown here, was cut by a maker famous for tweeds. Its simplicity and its easy line make it a grand utility coat, for all it's so smart. With it wear a matching hat with a leather band braided round the crown. Then there's a bag, big, bulky, square and business-like in the best manner. The burlap gloves in the circle would look divine with black linen dresses.

* * *

CORK'S ANOTHER sturdy-looking material which is really frivolous. Especially when it's lined, as the bag with the gilt metal stripes is, with a jaunty brown and yellow plaid. This looks heavenly with string or natural linen. And it keeps clean with just a go-over of soap suds and warm water.

* * *

THEN THERE'S monk's cloth, which used to be a curtain and day bed-cover fabric. The belt of it is white, as is its buckle, one side of which is metal, the other galalith. The bag will be adorable with the summer's countless cottons.

D. A. R. Members Hear Talk by Dr. Temple

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Until burglar alarms and police can be done away with in a governed country, arms cannot be done away with in an ungoverned world, Dr. Henry W. Temple told the Pittsburgh Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution yesterday. Nearly 300 members of the chapter were guests of the regent, Mrs. William Jackson Crittenden, and Mr. Crittenden at their home in Shields, and heard the exceptionally fine address on "Economic Factors in International Relations" at the Flag Day celebration.

Dr. Temple, who is a former Congressman and now occupies the chair of international relations at Washington and Jefferson College, in speaking of the London economic conference, said it is to be hoped the American people will understand the magnitude of the present difficulties and will support whatever agreement can be reached, not carping nor criticizing if the men in the conference fail to reach an ideal settlement.

Patriotism today means an interest in the affairs of the whole world, Dr. Temple said. He traced the present economic difficulties to the beginning of the World War and said the stock market crash was a result, not a cause, but in turn became a cause. He spoke of the $187,000,000,000 which the war cost the world, an amoutn which equaled the total wealth of the United States two years prior to the war. He spoke, too, of the 65,000,000 men who were taken away from producing the goods which constitute the wealth of the world, taken at their most productive age and put into the non-productive business of destroying each other. The dislocation of commerce, the private borrowings of Europeans, barriers to international trade and many other economic factors were touched upon by the speaker.

The guests were seated in the ballroom after Mr. and Mrs. Crittenden had greeted them informally. Bishop Alexander Mann, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Pittsburgh, offered the invocation, there was assembly singing and the Rev. H. R. Browne, of the Shields Presbyterian Church, pronounced the benediction.

As aides there were a number of young girls, including Mrs. William Goldsborough, daughter of the host and hostess; Miss Elizabeth Kirkpatrick, Miss Mary Helen Arthur, Miss Margaret Phillips, Mrs. John P. Henry, Miss Polly Buckmaster, Miss Louise Marsh, Miss Josephine Bygate, Miss Janice Marshall, Miss Betty Marshall, Miss Priscilla Barnes and Miss Elizabeth Carlin.

BLUE SWEATER: with contrasting neck and waist bands. 6 Chipso washings have left it soft and comfortable.

YOUNG ALLEN'S blouse has been kept strong and new-looking by Chipso, through more than 60 washdays.

SHELL PINK CREPE. Not faded a whit—after more than two years of safe Chipso tubbings.

THANKS TO CHIPSO this yellow silk dress is still pretty as the day it was made—3 summers ago.

BOB WRIGHT BETTY WRIGHT MRS. ROBERT G. WRIGHT ALLEN WRIGHT

"No faded, rubbed-thin clothes in our bureau drawers," smiles this mother of three

"Oh, I don't mean our clothes aren't old in years," Mrs. Robert G. Wright, of East Orange, N. J., hastens to explain. "It's just that Chipso keeps them from getting old-looking! Take Betty's pink dress, for instance. It's been washed and washed in Chipso for more than two years. And it's still so good she had her picture taken in it last Christmas."

"But then I've found you can depend on Chipso for everything," Mrs. Wright continues. "Hard water makes dishwashing a problem here, so I keep a box of Chipso handy in my kitchen, too. I like it because the suds don't settle into a hard scum in the dishpan. Chipso gets me through dishwashing in a jiffy and it is soft on my hands."

Yes, there's no getting around it. Once you try Chipso you're sold for life. It's miraculous to see how fast those deep rich suds divorce stubborn dirt from clothes, yet keep them bright and new-looking.

Chipso is not adulterated with the harsh substances contained in inferior soaps which gradually weaken fabrics and dull their color. Chipso loosens dirt harmlessly by RICHER SUDS. That is why Chipso-washed clothes stay new-looking for years.

Don't endanger the clothes you have spent good money for by washing them in cheap flakes or strong granulated soaps and powders. Get Chipso from your grocer. At its low price, Chipso is the biggest value in rich, safe soap on the market today!

Chipso makes clothes wear longer

ILLUSION :-: Rambling Through Starry Ways Of Make-Believe World :-: GLAMOUR

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Ham 'n' Rye

(With This Much Scotch!)

A last caress, a lingering kiss and then
You begged me to forget. I walked alone
Through dreary streets and faced a future when I'd think of you as just a girl I'd known.

The manner of our parting sent a surge
Of pride to swell my heart. We'd both despised
The crudities of friends who, on the verge
Of ending it—were far less civilized.

I'm sure we're not to blame because we let
Each other see in touching little ways
How deeply pained we were to bayonet
Our dream with cynic laughter, piercing phrase.

We burned so bravely in our private hell—
I think, my dear, we did it very well.

—Bill Carpenter.

Gag

E. V. Durling says that before the Marx Brothers, Sam H. Harris and Coley Madden purchased a gold mine in Mexico, George S. Kaufman was an interested listener when the salesman was bellowing the mine's merits.

"You never saw so much gold in your life!" excitedly said the salesman. "You don't even have to dig for it!. It's lying right there on the ground!"

Kaufman gave him that "over the-glasses-look" and said:

"You mean—you have to bend over?"

Oop!

Then there's the snapper that the same wit pulled on Harpo when Harpo came to the Kaufman home attired in a pair of old greasy trousers and shabby shoes.

"I never thought," said Kaufman, "that the day would come when you would look as awful below the table as you do above."

Atta Girl!

Dorothy Parker is better known for her flippancies. But she has great respect for women who have charm and manners. One night in a smart New York speakeasy when Mrs. Parker was surrounded by hoodlums, a friend brought over Franchot Tone's lovely mother and introduced them. Dorothy got up, shook Mrs. Tone's hand and sweetly said:

"How do you do, Mrs. Tone. It's so nice to meet a lady!"

Deadly Parallel

Among other barbs is Variety's, which would have you believe that The Writers, a distinguished group of men and women in Los Angeles, planned giving a dinner to 150 newspaper people and considered having us as its G. of H. The theatrical weekly adds that some members protested, as "Winchell was not considered a legitimate newspaperman, but simply a chatterer, etc."

The inaccuracy, it appears, embarrasses the Writers Club, which writes:

"My dear Mr. Winchell: I am returning herewith your letter, with your reply on the margin regretting that you were not able to attend the luncheon yesterday. Perhaps at some other time you will be our guest.

"It has just come to my attention that Variety reports that we contemplated a dinner of all Los Angeles newspapermen in your honor, but that some objected on the ground that you were not a regular newspaperman or some other equally ridiculous reason.

"As a matter of fact, Mr. Rupert Hughes, the president of the club, thinks it a good idea to have you. Let me assure you on behalf of the club and Mr. Hughes that we are very much embarrassed by the Variety report.—Monte Warner, manager."

Simile

Merciless Truth

Sad is the life of a gal who has wed
Readin' or workin' or standin' or sittin',
The gal has to hear the stuff the guy's written.
She is the dog that first samples his stuff—
—Fred B. Mann's Wife.

Sotto Voce

Tony Wons: That 98 per cent temper and 2 per cent mental quip is from the works of Helen Rowland.

Reader's Digest: That "Honeymoon is over" gag "when he stops calling her darling and starts yelling 'say!' is also Miss Rowland's.

F. P. A.: Thanks for wising me up on the Avery Hopwood facts.

Form of Criticism

Jules Levine tells about two phony intellectuals who, traveling on the same liner carrying a renowned writer, attempted to impress him. One night while discussing newspapers, the pseudos shouted their "high-brow" preferences.

"I always read Broun!" said the first.

"I prefer Lippmann," said the other.

The big-timer indifferently announced:

Haw!

A group of second-rate theatrical producers were swapping shop-talk, and discussing various living dramatic critics. One said that he knew one who was the toughest critic in the world!

"How tough is he?" interrupted a listener.

"He's so hard-boiled," was the reply, "that not only does he hate all shows, but he also hates George Jean Nathan!"

Pittsburgh Man's Drama, 'The Climax,' Again Has Revival

By GEORGE SEIBEL

A play by a Pittsburgh author opened in New York on Tuesday—not a new play, but an enduring success. It was Edward Locke's drama, "The Climax," which has lasted 25 years since Joe Weber put it on in Daly's old theater in special matinees and found he had an enormous hit on his hands.

Locke is a Pittsburgher. His father is still living here, as young as 18, though he must be past 80, and turning out some of the most beautiful art glass in America. This gave rise to the legend that "Ted" was a glassblower before he became a dramatist. It is one of those stories that ought to be true if they aren't. He was an actor when he first came here to visit his father in Mt. Oliver. I have a picture of him as Joe Sedley in a dramatic version of "Vanity Fair."

Mr. Seibel

Later I saw him play the Walking Delegate in "The Music Master" with David Warfield. From him I secured the recipe for Neapolitan spaghetti, as consumed nightly in Herr Barwig's studio, and learned how to "eat 'em alive."

'PARSIFAL' IN DRAMA

Then Edward Locke made his first dive into dramatic authorship. Heinrich Conried was putting "Parsifal" on at the Metropolitan Opera over the frantic protests of Frau Cosima. Ted Locke saw no reason why a play on the subject should not be a hit.

"Parsifal" was put on here by the Harry Davis Stock Company, with William Ingersoll as Parsifal and Eva Taylor as Kundry. I can still see Eva washing William's feet. I can still hear the sacred spear hurtling across the stage via some contrivance that resembled the old-style cash-carrier, the technocratic machine that put 300,000 cashboys among the unemployed.

It was in that production of "Parsifal" that the stage manager conceived the Napoleonic notion of beating Bayreuth, where they had only one Grail. He wanted to give every Knight of the Round Table a Grail, with a crimson electric bulb inside, glowing like blood.

"Parsifal" was Edward Locke's debut as a dramatist. It was a start, but did not damage Bayreuth.

THEN "THE CLIMAX"

Then came "The Climax." It was easy to trace the sources of the little drama. "The Music Master" had supplied the atmosphere of pathos. "Trilby" had furnished the psychology of voice production under hypnotic influence. "Paid in Full" had suggested the small cast. There are only four actors needed.

The little play proved an unexpected hit. It has been revived again and again, always with success. In the present production Guy Bates Post and Norma Terris have the principal roles. It may turn out to be a sensation again, like "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which the Players have had to run for three weeks instead of seven days.

Edward Locke has written other plays besides "The Climax." Frances Starr made a hit in "The Case of Becky," another drama of abnormal psychology. Fritz Leiber appeared in "The Revolt." But "The Climax" remains his big success. After that, of course, anything else would have been an anti-climax.

Powell Star In Warner

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Good old dime-novel hokum, the kind that teacher used to tell us was very bad for us when she confiscated the thriller she caught us reading while pretending to study that geography lesson in the halcyon days of youth, is the backbone of "Private Detective 62," current on the Warner screen, with William Powell in the title role.

We hear hokum decried on all sides, especially among high-hats who want their movies to be arty, but we imagine that lawyers, doctors, judges, engineers and other professional men who used to read those old "yellow-backs" (I never saw one with a yellow back) on the sly will not complain about the lack of art in "Private Detective 62." Although it is only a modern imitation of Beadle & Adams, it is thoroughly honest in being what it is, and deserves credit for that, anyway. At that, it is as close to life as most movies stressing the sex angle.

All of which means that if you don't expect too much in the way of plausibility of plot, and be satisfied with the fact that it has one, you will like "Private Detective 62" as much for its story as for its nice portrayals of thoroughly fictional characters by Mr. Powell and his associates.

Mr. Powell, always the old smoothie, is as suave and self-assured as ever as dismissed member of the diplomatic service who worms his way into a partnership in a detective agency, that specializes in "framing" divorce evidence. Inately he is too decent for that class of work, so he helps some who are supposed to get the works.

Among them is Margaret Linsay, late of "Cavalcade," and nice to look at. There is a murder, too, which might involve our heroine, but everything is straightened out by the masterful "Private Detective 62."

Meet Mimi

Miriam Jordan changed her name to Mimi, bobbed her hair and dropped a little dignity to make the execs believe she wasn't too staid for a certain role—and got it.

Invitation to Eat Brings Results

Forty tuxedos were sent to 40 cleaners by 40 baffled extras as the result of an involuntary mob scene in Paramount's "College Humor." The extras, properly attired for a sorority dance, were supposed to mob the sideboard where a complete buffet supper was laid out. Not a sandwich nor a vest was damaged during the scene. When it was finished Director Wesley Ruggles told the boys to help themselves. When the riot was over there wasn't an olive, an unsmeared shirt or a dry eye in the house. Needless to say, Ruggles photographed that scramble and will use it in the picture.

Gable's Illness Gives Tone Chance For Lead

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, June 15.—Hunting grizzly bears will cost Clark Gable the chance to play opposite Joan Crawford in "Dancing Lady."

The rugged star contracted illness from exposure on his recent expedition and will have to undergo a thorough physical examination He returned to Hollywood, worked in added scenes for the Jean Harlow picture and then took to his bed. He has been there most of the time for the last few days.

With the "Dancing Lady" scheduled to begin immediately Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is testing Franchot Tone for the male lead. If he gets it, there'll have to be another replacement, for he was cast for another role in the picture.

Meanwhile, Joan and Franchot continue to be seen everywhere together. Sometimes they are members of large parties, but often they go alone. Franchot says Joan is teaching him the finer points of dancing.

They get a laugh at United Artists over the embarrassing experience of an executive's secretary.

She went over to the Fairbanks dressing room expecting to find her boss, but barged in on Ralph Graves, just out of the steam room in his undies.

With a horrified look, the secretary fled. Still blushing intermittently an hour later, she looked up from her typewriter to find Graves standing there with a broad grin. Leaning down, he patted her shoulder.

"Well, little girl," he said, "the only thing I can do is to offer marriage."

It isn't so sure now that Boris Karloff will go to another company. The star of "Frankenstein" has renewed negotiations with Universal.

Like a penny shocker reads the experience of Jack Miller, technical adviser on "I Am a Fugitive" and "Laughter in Hell." When these two pictures were released, Miller, a former member of a Georgia chain gang, signed up for a series of personal appearances in Southern California theaters. His act was to illustrate some of the punishments inflicted on the prisoners.

On March 10, in the late afternoon, Miller stood on the stage of a movie house in Huntington Park. He was handcuffed and tied to a whipping post. Around his legs were heavy chains and to his feet were attached heavy iron balls.

As the hand of the clock turned to five minutes to 6 there was a rumble, a trembling of the earth. While the small audience fled in terror, Miller stood helpless. Debris fell around him. He was knocked senseless.

Only now, three months later, is he recovering from the nervous breakdown brought on by the shock.

Did you know: That Onslow Stevens, Marion Davies' leading man in "Peg O' My Heart," saw service with the United States Army in China when he was only 14 years old?

The Great Surgeon

The room itself is large and oval. In the direct center is the operating table. Sunlight diffuses through the quartz glass ceiling and makes the table stand out in bold relief.

Two doctors and several nurses move quickly but quietly over the polished floor. The nurses wipe instruments and whisper. The two doctors stand waiting. They look like immaculate highway robbers, with that white cloth tied over their faces.

Suddenly, Dr. Winthrop sweeps into the room. He is a big man. Big, and fat. His white surgical coat billows and rustles noisily as he moves about.

He is the Great Surgeon. He is noted for his skill and daring. The medical students in the gallery watch him as he moves over to his assistant, Dr. Marlow. They confer for a moment.

Dr. Marlow is a good surgeon. A very good surgeon. For eight years he has been first assistant to the Great Surgeon. Some of the cynics whisper that he is even greater than Dr. Winthrop. But Dr. Winthrop had married the sister of that famous political leader.

That makes a big difference—in any line of endeavor . . .

The Great Surgeon glances at the chart. He notices that the temperature for the last 24 hours has been irregular. He notes also that this morning's case concerns a kidney. A very bad kidney.

The students watch closely. They know that the operation is highly dangerous. It's a hit-or-miss proposition, and several of them bet on the outcome. The odds are very much on the Great Surgeon. He seldom misses.

For a while, Dr. Winthrop and Dr. Marlow move around the patient. The nurses stand at attention. The head nurse hands instruments to Dr. Marlow. He hands them to Dr. Winthrop. Something is laid on a table. Then the patient is wheeled away.

Dr. Winthrop takes off his mask. His forehead is beaded with perspiration. He holds the diseased kidney aloft. He makes a speech to the students. His words are concise and curt.

In a few moments, the big room is empty. The sunlight diffuses itself on a vacant spot on the floor. The Great Surgeon has gone to another room, to examine a few patients.

He looks at the little boy first. The little boy is crying. Big tears roll down his cheeks. The Great Surgeon looks at the chart on the case. Then he notes the purplish spots on the youngster's forehead. He reads the chart again.

The boy is a hemophiliac. He bleeds internally. He doesn't feel sick, but he's frightened. The Great Surgeon examines the kid's heart. It beats fast, like a rabbit's, when you scoop him up on the run.

The Great Surgeon clears his throat. He talks to the boy. Not exactly kindly. More like a schoolmaster, I'd say.

"Jerry," he says, sternly, "you want to get well, don't you?"

The boy chokes, and nods. The tears are coming faster now.

"Well, you've got to grow up first. You've got to become a man. Sniveling and crying are for babies. You're not a baby any more. You're a man. Cut it out now. Buck up, and hold your chin out. There."

One after another, he examines patients. To some, he says nothing. Of others, he asks a few questions and makes new chart notes. To still others he talks sternly, always along the same lines.

"Come on," he says. Buck up. You act as thoungh your case were hopeless. Well, get that out of your mind. It's not true.

"Plenty of people die every year because they think they're going to. They won't give themselves a chance. Suppose I felt that way during operations. My nerve would be gone. I wouldn't be worth a nickel.

"Be hard boiled like I am. That's the spirit." . . .

The young internes who always accompanied the Great Surgeon were familiar with that speech. Sometimes, even they got it. He had no sympathy with people who were afraid of hospitals, operations and death. Once during an operation, a young nurse fainted. She lost her chance then and there. The Great Surgeon had her transferred to the Recorder's Office, where she never saw any more active duty.

There were a few other cases like that. But no one ever talked about them. That is, openly. For there are certain things, even in a hospital, which are better left unsaid.

A year ago, the city awoke to read that the Great Surgeon had resigned. No reason was given. Dr. Winthrop merely said he felt the urge to resume private practice. A famous political leader issued a stirring statement in which he said that the city would never be able to find a man to fill the shoes of the Great Surgeon.

In the Recorder's Office the little nurse who had been transferred tittered to herself. She knew why the Great Surgeon had resigned. In fact, she had witnessed what happened.

The episode had taken place the day before his resignation. The Great Surgeon—in his usual form—was very busy escorting a group of society social workers around the hospital.

As the party entered the Recorder's Office, the little nurse heard him make the old familiar hard-boiled speech. About the effect that iron nerves had on certain cases, and matters along those lines. The social workers listened in rapt attention. They all nodded in perfect agreement.

All, that is, but the head nurse and the little nurse who had been transferred for fainting. They had both heard it so many times before . . .

Dr. Winthrop had finished showing a few X-ray prints. He placed them back in the files, and faced the wide-eyed group.

"And now," he asserted, "if you will follow me, we will consider another angle of hospital work. It is very seldom that I, personally, take visitors around and I trust that you——"

Without any warning, his foot slipped as he turned to lead the way out. The ponderous body balanced itself for a fraction of a second, and then crashed against a steel cabinet that stood nearby. His head struck the edge of the cabinet with a sickening thud.

The women social workers shrieked in unison. The head nurse called for help. The little nurse stood petrified. And then, as other doctors and nurses came running, the doctor stepped away from the cabinet.

He forced a smile.

"Just a little slip," he said. "It's nothing at all. Just a trifle dazed for a second, that's all. You people get back to your work. There's nothing to it. I merely slipped—and oh!"

Reflectively, he rubbed the back of his head. Suddenly, his selfconfident air faded and in its place came fear. He withdrew his hand and looked at it. The fingers were smeared with his own, sticky blood.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

"Honus" Wagner receiving honors in Pittsburgh is shown in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. After a street parade Honus is seen at Forbes Field receiving a check for $1,500, gift of admirers, and he is heard in chats with Fred Clark and George Gibson. He expresses appreciation for the honors paid him.

There also are highlights of the National Open Golf tournament, at Glenview, Ill. Johnny Goodman, the sensational young player of Omaha, is pictured finishing his round which was to bring him the title, with a par on the last hole. The Globe Trotter describes the thrilling plays of the match.

Another sports picture shows Hurryoff, a rank outsider, winning the richest racing award to three-year olds in the world, the Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park, carrying a purse of $50,000. With a phenomenal burst of speed he passes eight horses, one by one, to win one of the most exciting and unusual races of the year.

From the south portico of the White House, President Roosevelt greets 1,000 agriculture students and encourages them with words of good cheer.

(Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange their programs in time schedules, it is possible that some of the subjects in the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.)

VET FAILS TO GO DISTANCE IN MONTH

THOUGH HE SHOWED improved form to some extent yesterday, and, while beaten by the Cardinals, was more effective in the main during his stay on the mound than in other recent games, Heinie Meine still is unable to shake off the jinx that keeps him from lasting through a full contest. That makes six straight starts, and seven of the last eight, in which Meine has failed to go the distance. If he isnt' ineffective, his games takes a turn that make it necessary to lift him for a pinch-hitter. He hasn't won a game nor pitched a complete one in exactly one month, or since May 15, when he defeated the Phillies here, 5 to 4.

Heinie Meine

Starting off with five straight victories, Heinie now has lost four games in a row, so what had been figured as a gain for the Pirates in having him available for the full season this year, instead of losing his services for six weeks or longer through a holdout, has just about been erased. However, the veteran's improved showing yesterday offers the hope that he soon will be the same old dependable again. The defeat cannot be charged to poor pitching. Had the Bucs been able to place a bunt in the right spot on either of two occasions, the result might have been changed.

IT IS NOW only a matter of hours until baseball law will prohibit the transfer of players from one club to another in the major leagues except by the waiver process. The deadline on trading or selling players otherwise will be reached at midnight.

Whether any deals will be consummated in the short time that remains hinges on the possibility of a change of mind on the part of some of the club heads. Several proposals and counter offers are known to have been made, but in each case one side balked. The parties may or may not get together before midnight strikes.

FANS WHO THOUGHT the American League pitchers had stopped Jimmy Foxx early in the season have been wondering how the Mackian slugger suddenly managed to bombard the same flingers. Foxx explains that his late start was due to a faulty stance.

After he had tried all sizes and types of bats and had been moved to a different place in the batting order without result, Jimmy discovered that his left foot was out of line with his right when he stood to take his swing. He corrected that, and his annual home-run crop has been piling up ever since.

ANY MINOR LEAGUE club that happens not to be going well has a bigger field than ever before from which to select replacements. More than 500 professional ball players are out of work and ready to respond in a hurry to any calls for new timber. One club to take advantage of the situation by making frequent changes in its lineup in Jersey City, in the International League. Manager Bernard Kelly already has had 41 players on his roster, and has fired 24 of them. He had only seven men to start with, and five of these—Perkins, Pipgras, Clancy, Cascarella and Rensa—have managed to survive the long series of shakeups. Nobody knows when his job is safe. Only recently, Outfielder Johnny Jones hit a home run in the eleventh inning to beat Baltimore, but the reward he got was a release.

Walter Brown

WALTER BROWN, standing 6 feet 3 inches and weighing close to 250 pounds, is not only one of the biggest pitchers in baseball, but his Yankee mates predict that he soon will be rated among the best. After a long term of bullpen service Brown is getting his chance in real games and is more than coming through.

The heat bothered the big pitcher in a couple of his late appearances, but the Yanks think that once he gets settled he will mow down all opposition. Walter has the speed to overpower the batters, as he demonstrated recently by holding the A's to five hits and striking out 12 men in six and two-thirds innings. Facing Jimmy Foxx six times in two games he struck out the slugger five times.

BROWN IS NOT a newcomer in the majors, as he was up twice before the Yankees got him from Oklahoma City in 1929 and farmed him out a couple of times. His first engagement in the big show was with the Cubs and the second with the Indians.

Walter's chance with the Cubs came in 1925, when he was only 18. He got the opportunity through the intercession of a friend who knew Rabbit Maranville, then manager of the Bruins. Brown lasted only as long as the Rabbit did as manager.

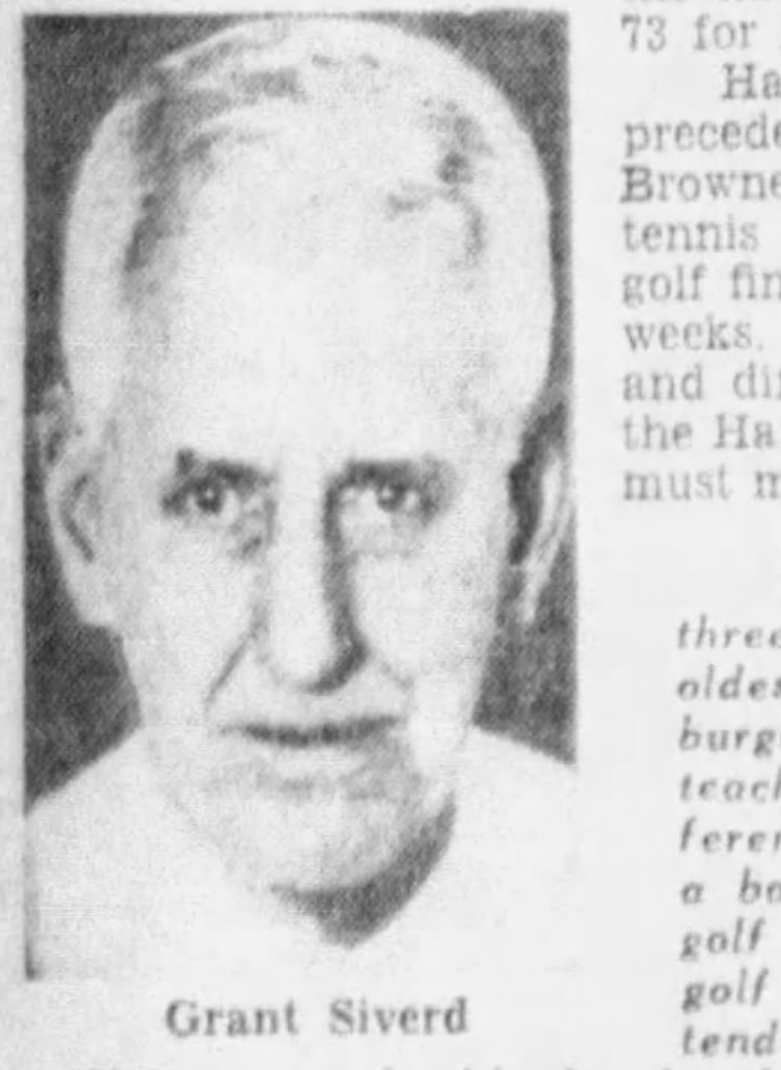
WHILE MAX BAER is in Pittsburgh with Jack Dempsey today to start a coast-to-coast tour at the North Braddock bowl tonight, discussions of his surprising victory over Max Schmeling continue in New York. Not taking anything away from Baer's personal triumph, Eastern critics insist that a large portion of the credit belongs to the two extra seconds hired for the occasion, Whitey Bimstein and Ray Arcel. More than any other big fight in recent years, they contend, last week's battle was won in the corner. Bimstein and Arcel, knowing Schmeling better than any one else save his manager, Joe Jacobs, sensed the German's condition, it is said, and at the end of the eighth round they told Manager Ancil Hoffman to instruct Baer to cut loose if Schmeling did not show any improvement in the ninth frame. Baer found Schmeling just as his seconds had diagnosed and sent him reeling with the first solid blow planted on his chin.

THE WIDESPREAD CONVICTION fostered by many professionals that golf is a full-time game, and can be played successfully only by those who devote themselves to it to the exclusion of all other sports, suffered striking contradiction when Sam Harbison, former Princeton tennis star, forsook the racquet diversion temporarily to register low net score of the annual Allegheny Country Club invitation links tournament.

Harbison, lately returned from Cornell medical school, is best known athletically for his court prowess. Indeed, he is rated one of the leading contenders for the men's singles honors of the forty-fifth annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships, scheduled to begin at Stanton Heights here Saturday.

THAT THE VICTORY of Harbison at Allegheny was no unmerited gift of the handicap system is attested by the fact that his card was only one stroke over that of Fred Brand, Jr., the gross winner, and that he led a field that included three former champions of the national amateur realm with a brilliant 73 for his opening round.

Harbison's feat is reminiscent of the unprecedented achievement of Mary K. Browne, who in 1924 was national women's tennis semi-finalist and national women's golf finalist within a span of less than three weeks. Golf is admittedly a most exacting and difficult pastime, but the Brownes and the Harbisons refute the contention that one must make it a life work to play it creditably.



Grant Siverd

GRANT SIVERD, approaching the three-score-ten mark, and perhaps the oldest really active athlete in the Pittsburgh district, is an ardent disciple of teaching the young idea as many different games as possible. "I hate to see a boy of 10 or so starting out to the golf course," declares Siverd, "not that golf isn't a fine game, but because its tendency is to crowd out other sports. Youngsters should play baseball, football, tennis and such other vigorous games as tend to develop self-reliance and the ability to absorb knocks. When boys take up golf at too early an age, they are in danger of narrowing their sport horizon too soon, with consequent detriment to both pleasure and sportsmanship." Siverd, an able performer at golf, tennis and squash racquets at a stage of life when most men have long since retired from vigorous diversions, offers living testimony to the value of a balanced athletic diet. He played baseball until he was 35, then took up tennis, and later added racquets and golf. The veteran has geared his program to his years, but still pursues his three favorite recreations with regularity and effect worthy of players of half his age.

Baer and Dempsey Broadcast With the Globe Trotter

Max Baer, conqueror of Max Schmeling, and Promoter Jack Dempsey and Max's manager and trainer speaking over WCAE and WJAS with Globe-Trotter Louis L. Kaufman from the editorial rooms of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph at 12:15 today. James (Red) Mason and Jules Beck also participated. Baer and Dempsey appear in an exhibition performance at the North Braddock Bowl tonight, with Dempsey acting as referee. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

BUC CATCHERS LACK POTENCY AT PLATE

CHICAGO, June 15.—When one pennant contender invades the very hostile territory of another and comes through the test with an even break, the tenets of sportsmanship would have the invaders' supporters exclaim something akin to "well done!" It is not the intention of this article, then, to belittle the Buccos for their even split in the four games with the Cardinals, but it is quite another thing to point out some Pirate flaws that developed in the crucial tests with the Redbirds.

When George Gibson landed his Buccos in Chicago today he had some deep concern over his catching department. He did not have to search far to discover that his three catchers, collectively, were hitting less than .200; moreover he was not forced to consult the records to appreciate the difference in the punch reflected in other National League receiving staffs as compared with his own.

HARTNETT REAL STAR

Right here in Chicago are the Cubs who would not be in the race at all were it not for an all-around punch man named Leo Hartnett, one of the game's greatest catchers. Possessed of a home-run sock, Gabby also has that jewel of consistency in his bat work and he has enough pepper to spread over three or four clubs.

So much for the Cubs—now take a peek backward at the Cardinals and you will see Jimmy Wilson, who deserves to be ranked with Hartnett in the point of value. Jimmy has punch, pepper and smartness. Move down a bit

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: A WATER VOLCANO—La Antiqua, capital of Guatemala in the Spanish days, was a city of great importance, being famed as a site of great schools of theology and science. In 1541, the rumblings of an earthquake were heard one evening. Intense darkness spread over the valley and without warning a great deluge issued through a fissure in the crater of the extinguished volcano Agua, completely destroying the city. The volcano was so named because it contained an immense quantity of water, accumulated through successive melting of snowfalls over a long period of time. The name Guatemala is said to be a corruption of Uhatezmalha, (Water Spewing Mountain), Mount Agua's aboriginal name.

MARRIAGE TALK SHUNNED BY RING HERO

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

"Let's talk fight. You know, I don't have my divorce yet."

DEMPSEY BALKS PARADE

Outside the station awaited a fleet of automobiles to carry Baer and Dempsey and Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, and Mike Cantwell, his trainer, and Maurice Cain, Dempsey's business representative, to the Hotel William Penn. An open car, decorated with bunting, was pointed out to Dempsey as the one in which he and Baer were to head the parade. The former champion, who always has been great stuff for meeting the crowds, reneged for once in his life, protesting:

"Not me. Say, who's idea was this, anyway? Here we are to show off Baer at an exhibition and somebody wants to show him off for nothing. We'll take a closed cab."

And he did.

SPEAK OVER WCAE-WJAS

In the hotel, Dempsey and Baer received the reporters for interviews. Later the pair, accompanied by Jules Beck, the matchmaker of the Bowl, came to the editorial department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph for a WCAE-WJAS radio broadcast with Louis L. Kaufman, the Globe Trotter, at 12:15 p. m. Then Baer went to the Fulton Theater to look at the movies of his fight with Schmeling and then moved on to the Bowl to be examined and weighed by the boxing commission.

weighed by the Boxing Commission.

Trainer Cantwell, who got his job with Baer through Ty Cobb, the baseball star, whom he formerly trained, elaborated on the 24-year-old Baer's indifference to criticism. He said:

"You know, there's a sports writer in San Francisco who has been on both Baer and me for a long time. After Max beat Schmeling he went up to this fellow and told him, 'I hope you're satisfied. Now, I just want to say one thing. You can write anything you please about me, just so you spell my name right, but I want you to lay off of my trainer. Or else.'"

DEMPSEY AT EASE

Dempsey appeared to be more rested and at ease than when he was here with Schmeling for an exhibition at Motor Square Garden recently. He said he made little money on his New York fight, but was satisfied with its artistic success and hoped to clean up the next time Baer fights. He said he doesn't care whether Jack Sharkey or Primo Carnera wins in their battle in New York two weeks from tonight, saying Baer against either will prove a great match.

Baer chimed in that he hopes Sharkey wins, for he'd like to have the pleasure of beating him, especially after some disparaging remarks Jack is said to have made about him after he beat Schmeling, adding, significantly:

"But I notice Sharkey's wife said he'd never fight me. Maybe he'd better not, at that. He's a family man with a couple of kids."

DISCUSSES SHARKEY

Dempsey said he was not surprised by reports that Sharkey is market broke and property poor. He said:

"I was in his camp and he's certainly taking his work seriously."

Dempsey said he hoped to be able to match Baer with the winner of the Sharkey-Carnera bout for this fall, but might not be able to do it until next summer. The present tour takes the Baer party to Dayton, O., for a show tomorrow night under the promotion of Frank Mantell, old middleweight boxer, and it is booked in Buffalo on Monday. From Buffalo the junket will move south as far as New Orleans, from where an airplane trip will be made to New York for the Sharkey fight, after which the exhibitions will be continued.

UNHURT BY SCHMELING

Baer said Schmeling could not hurt him in their fight and he was confident of the result from the start.

With the weather warming up, indications are that a larger crowd will turn out to see Dempsey and the colorful Baer perform tonight than were on deck for the Schmeling exhibition.

Backing up the three-round exhibition by Baer with Pete Wistort, of Chicago, will be one 10-round and three six-round battles. Dempsey will referee the windup, between Sunny Jim McVey, local Negro heavyweight, and Buddy McArthur, of Fairmont, W. Va., and formerly of McKeesport, who in his most recent engagement boxed Maxie Rosenbloom, the world light-heavyweight champion, in Clarksburg, W. Va.

CLEMENTS VS. PALLAT

M'CARTHY SUSPENDED

BOSTON, Mass., June 15.—(INS.)—Joe McCarthy, manager of the New York Yankees, received word from William Harridge, president of the American League, today that he had been suspended for three days for talking harshly to Umpire Bill Summers in the seventh inning of yesterday's ball game with the Red Sox.

M'KEE LEADS HOBLITZEL FOR GOLF TITLE

PANTHER STAR 2 UP AFTER 18 HOLES

By TOM BIRKS

Claude McKee, of Pitt, was leading Jack Hoblitzel, of West Virginia, 2 up, as they started their second 18-hole round in the 36-hole final of the first annual tri-state district intercollegiate golf championship tournament at the South Hills Country Club this afternoon.

Shooting a fine 36, only one over par, on the first nine this morning, McKee gained his margin of 2 up, and then guarded it during a see-saw second nine, in the playing of which only two holes were halved.

Hoblitzel, who was pulling his tee shots badly throughout the morning round, was in a fine position to cut his Panther opponent's lead to one hole at the eighteenth green, but when McKee exploded out of a trap he stymied the Mountaineer, and the hole was halved.

M'KEE HAS 79 MEDAL

Faulty work on the short holes boosted McKee's medal score to 79, as compared to 81 for Hoblitzel. The morning round cards:

Par—out	4	5	4	3	4	4	3	4	5	—36
McKee	4	5	4	4	4	4	4	4	5	—38
Hoblitzel	4	6	5	3	4	4	3	6	6	—41
Par—in	5	4	3	4	4	3	4	4	4	—35	—71
McKee	6	5	3	5	4	5	4	4	5	—41	—79
Hoblitzel	6	4	3	4	5	3	5	5	5	—40	—81

Hoblitzel, on his way to the final yesterday, put out Bob Haverstick, of Tech, 3 and 1, and then eleminated Charley Kay, also of Tech, 4 and 3. McKee disposed of Bob Lowe, another West Virginia star, 4 and 3, and took the measure of Art Sekay, Pitt teammate, 1 up, in a 19-hole semi-final duel.

At Fox Chapel, the West Penn Women's Golf Association is holding a one-day tourney, which will serve as a warm-up event for the big invitation tourney scheduled at Allegheny Country Club tomorrow and Saturday.

JIM RAMSEY WINS

Jimmy Ramsay, of Highland Country Club, turned in a fine card of 40-36-76 to lead the large field of 193 players in the one-day state amateur tourney over the Pittsburgh Field Club course yesterday.

Trailing the little Highlander came George H. Flinn, Jr., of Fox Chapel, who scored a 41-36-77, and Dr. Tom Canon, of St. Clair, former Pitt star, was third with 42-36-78.

The low net awards were divided. William Simeral, of Highland, and F. H. Houghton, of Shannopin, each had scores of 69.

In the four-ball, best ball match against par, played under seven-eighth handicap, Dr. Paul Steele, of Oakmont, and Dr. W. L. Johnson, of Stanton Heights, finished 6 up, as did Ted Corbett, former Pitt cross-country star, and Dr. P. G. Cooper, of Shannopin.

In a two-ball, mixed foursome tourney at Edgewood yesterday, H. B. Charles and Mrs. L. G. Riley, of the home club, led in the first division with a low medal score of 86-9-77. In the second division, F. F. Rohrer and Mrs. W. L. Thunhurst had a low gross of 102-20-82, as did W. Bruchman, of Stanton Heights, and Mrs. E. A. Eisenbeis, of Edgewood.

PIRATE SCOUT SEEKS TALENT ON COAST

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Bill Hinchman, Pirate scout, has landed on the Pacific Coast in quest of several promising young diamond stars, it developed today. Making a quiet exit from Pittsburgh recently, Bill arrived without a blare of trumpets in Los Angeles a few days later.

Hinchman went at once to the Los Angeles ball park where Hollywood and the Seattle clubs were engaged in a series. Apparently he focused his attention on two young members of the Seattle club who made a big impression on Manager Gibson, Capt. Traynor and others in the Buccaneer party while the Bucs were on the Coast.

SEEK SPANISH RECRUIT

The two promising athletes are Outfielder Mel Almada and Second Baseman Fred Muller. The former, still under 20, has the ability of a Waner. He is a Spanish kid and a graduate of a Los Angeles high school. Mel is a lefthander all the way. He is batting .312 to date.

Almada is the younger brother of Louis Almada, who, while playing the outfield for the San Francisco Missions, had amassed the sensational hitting mark of .404 up to this week.

Muller is one of the prize recruits of the Coast League. Muller last season led the home run hitters of the coast circuit with a string of 38 round-trippers.

DEAL MAY FOLLOW

If the Seattle owners do not hold out for an unreasonable sum there is a strong likelihood that they and the Pittsburgh bosses will be successful in closing some sort of a deal.

Another Coast League recruit who will be studied by Scout Hinchman is Firstbaseman Ellsworth Dahlgren, of the Mission club.

Pirate President William E. Benswanger stated today he would attend the annual midsummer meeting of the National League to be held next Tuesday at the Commodore Hotel, New York City. The question of attendance at the various park is likely to be taken up by the magnates. The patronage at Forbes Field, Benswanger declared, is better than it was up to the same date of last year.

Between Rounds

Ted Yarosz meets one of the toughest punchers in the middleweight class in facing Sammy Slaughter, Terre Haute Negro, in one of the three 10-round bouts on the Patsy Perroni-Johnny Risko card in the Cleveland Stadium tonight.

Jack Portney, who boxes Baby Joe Gans in one of the two 10-rounders at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night, is a southpaw, 22 years old, who has been boxing six years and has lost only six bouts in 73 and includes among his victims Louis (Kid) Kaplan, Buster Brown, Johnny Hayes, Steve Halaiko, Eddie Cool, Jimmy Reed and Wildcat O'Connor. His stablemate, Lew Raymond, nephew of Vince and Joe Dundee, boxes Billy Holt in another 10-rounder.

Johnny Riske, South Hills middleweight, is back in fighting trim again with the hand he injured boxing Carmen Barth strengthened with a lot of wood-chopping.

Pete Wistort and Seal Harris are Max Baer's sparring partners on tour. Pete got in yesterday along with George Simpson, who boxes on tonight's card, and, after a workout in the Motor Square Garden gymnasium, went to the Fulton Theater to look at the movies of the BaBer-Schmeling fight, which, incidentally, are very good.

The pictures reveal Baer as a none too fast-moving big fellow, but a rapid-fire puncher with both fists. Schmeling seems slower than usual, but keeps forcing the fight over most of the route, although he appears to be unable to get any steam into his punches. He finally goes down under an avalanche of blows in the final round and is in no condition to protect himself when the referee intervenes.

CHAMP SETS RECORD

HOYLAKE, England, June 15.—(AP.)—Ross (Sandy) Somerville, the London, Ont., golfer who holds the United States amateur title, turned in a record-breaking round of 67 yesterday in preparation for the British amateur championship next week and followed it up with a fine 72.

W. PA. SINGLES ENTRY LIST TO CLOSE TODAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Aspirants to men's singles honors of the Western Pennsylvania tennis championship have until 5 o'clock this evening to file entries for the David I. McCahill Cup quest. Tournament Chairman Frank S. Smith will receive names by telephone at Atlantic 2800 until the stated hour, after which various Pittsburgh Tennis Association moguls will convene at the Stanton Heights Golf Club, site of the competition, and attend the formalities of seeding and draw-making. Man-to-man contesting gets under way on the North Aiken lot Saturday at 1:30 p. m.

Advance indications, according to Chairman Smith, point to exceptionally strong fields in all five branches of play.

The addition of Mrs. Martha Guthrie Snowdon to a feminine singles array, reckoned powerful even previously, means that no less than four past captors of Western Pennsylvania ladies' laurels will vie for the Honus Wagner goblet, Mrs. Snowdon, Dorothy Jarvis, Miriam Sullivan and 1932 champion, Dorothy Anderson, of Butler, Pa., and the University of Southern California. With the foregoing quartet in the milling, it is certain that mixed and women's doubles will also furnish spirited action.

Jack Redmond and Art Glaser, Winged Head dual combination, kept their Inter-Club League slate immaculate by trimming Bud Leyda and Gil Morcroft, 6-1, 6-4, in ultimate fray of the postponed P. A. A.-Shanopin engagement on the Red and Gray lot yesterday.

Representatives of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association were heard in special pre-West Penn tourney program on the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Trained Seals period over Station WCAE last evening. J. Phillips Davis, Grant Siverd, Austin Famariss, H. Vernon Porter, Dr. John O'Loughlin, Sam Harbison, Billy O'Loughlin, Bill Haseltine, Harry Keck and Paul Sullivan were on the card.

A Statement by the Standard Oil Co. of Pennsylvania

IT WAS NOT A COINCIDENCE or an accident that the frantic claims which are appearing in current gasoline advertising were published all at the same time. There HAS been a recent improvement in gasoline. Many of the gasolines sold by well-known companies have been stepped up in anti-knock quality. Some are advertised as containing lubricating oil ● These new improvements are the source of all the challenges and counter-challenges, claims and counter-claims and the wild statements that are now being dinned into your ears ● This company has, of course, made the utmost use of these new means of giving you more fuel value for your money. But because of this we are not going to try to make you think that when you spend a few pennies for a gallon of gasoline you now get the services of Aladdin and his wonderful lamp and skim over the world with no effort or cost ● But we will point out one thing. This company, the world's largest oil organization, asks you to believe no claims. We make none. Everything said about Essolene bears our guarantee ●

FIRST ● Essolene is compounded with a special lubricating solvent which is not intended to act as a motor lubricant but to clean, keep clean, smooth, and in proper working condition, valve stems, piston rings and piston ring grooves. Essolene contains no ordinary lubricating oil.

This Statement is Guaranteed

SECOND ● Essolene's anti-knock value is unsurpassed by any regular priced gasoline.

This Statement is Guaranteed

THIRD ● In Essolene the gaseous fractions have been removed to such an extent that it is non-gas-locking.

This Statement is Guaranteed

● These statements were released only after the most thorough tests of Essolene and competitive products in the world's largest Petroleum Research Laboratories ● These are the guaranteed facts about Essolene. Read them carefully ● Essolene, sponsored by the Standard Oil Company of Pennsylvania, is sold through Esso Stations and Dealers from Maine to Louisiana, and is colored orange to prevent substitution.

DODGERS GET LESLIE

CLARK, O'DOUL TRADED FOR GIANT STAR

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—The New York Giants today announced they had traded Sam Leslie, reserve first baseman, to the Brooklyn Dodgers for Watson Clark, left-handed pitcher, and Frank (Lefty) O'Doul, outfielder.

The transaction was a straight player trade, said Secretary Jim Tierney, of the Giants, and no cash was involved. The players will join their new teams today.

The acquisition of Leslie, a reserve player only because he is on the same team with Manager Bill Terry, acclaimed the best first baseman in the major leagues, plugs a weakness in the Brooklyn infield Manager Max Carey has been atempting to fill for two years.

CLARK ABLE PITCHER

O'Doul was the leading batter of the National League last year, but has been playing erratically this year, and several days ago was benched by Carey in favor of Hack Wilson. He was with the Giants in 1928, being traded to Philadelphia by John McGraw for Fred Leach and cash. He came to the Dodgers two years ago.

Clark, a regular with Brooklyn since 1927, was one of the leading pitchers of the National League last year, with 20 victories against 12 defeats.

The Giants yesterday maintained their lead of one game in the National League race by defeating the Braves, 8 to 5, while the Cardinals were downing the Pirates, 3 to 2. The Braves scored five runs in the first inning when Parmalee, who started for New York, issued five passes, but Luque's relief pitching was superb.

ROOT BLANKS REDS

Charley Root held the Reds to two hits as the Cubs won, 7-0, and the Dodgers captured sixth place by defeating the Phillies, 6-3.

After a day in fourth place, the Cleveland Indians returned to the second division of the American League by taking a 13-2 pasting from Detroit.

To complete a triumph for the second division, the St. Louis Browns turned on the Chicago White Sox, pounding out 14 hits to win 14-1. The last-place Boston Red Sox made it three straight over the New York Yankees, lacing out eight runs in the seventh and eighth innings to win, 13-5.

John Anderson, Star Golfer, Dies

COLUMBUS, O., June 15.—(INS.)—John G. Anderson, 49, of New York, famous golfer and athletic leader, died today at the home of his father-in-law, Dr. L. H. Mann, here.

Anderson's death followed an illness of several years from kidney trouble. He is survived by his wife and two children.

Twice winner of the Massachusetts amateur golf title, in 1907 and 1911, Anderson was runner-up for the National title in 1913 and 1915, and twice won the French amateur championship, in 1924 and 1926. In all he won 53 sectional, city and National titles in his 25 years of play.

Funeral services will be held Saturday from the Methodist Episcopal Church in Crestwood, Westchester County, New York, where he made his home.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

EN ROUTE WEST, June 15.—I saw where those Van Swearingen boys ran a shoestring up to a $300,000,000 railroad system, so today I says to Griff:

Nick Altrock

"The U. S. Senate is going to investigate your shoelaces next."

Griff said:

"How come?"

I said:

"Where were you on the afternoon of August 15, 1904?"

Griff said:

"I was managing the New York Yankees."

I said:

"For how much dough?"

Griff said:

"For 5,000 bucks."

I said:

"And what's your activity now?"

Griff said:

"I am owner of the Washington Club."

I said:

"How much do you think it's worth?"

Griff said:

"I wouldn't sell for $2,000,000."

I said:

"Did J. P. Morgan finance your infield?"

Griff said:

"No."

I said:

"Did Kuhn-Loeb put up any dough for your batteries?"

Griff said:

"No."

I said:

"Did Dillon-Read ever own a piece of your grandstand?"

Griff said:

"No."

I said:

"How did you run a shoelace up to $2,000,000 then?"

Griff said:

I said:

SEASON MARK SET AT OVAL

There is a new season mark at which the trotters may shoot in future meetings at Schenley Oval. It was hung up yesterday by Dr. I. B. Reed's Albert Worth, with Ben Whitehead in the sulky, as the Schenley Matinee Club offered its weekly program of harness events. The new time is 2:09¾, made despite a heavy track.

Two split-heat victories were recorded during the six-event program. In the free-for-all trot, Great Atlantic won the first, lost the second to Albert Worth, when the latter set its fine record, and then came back to take the third.

Little Abbey was second to Toddy Lucas in the first heat of the fourth event, a pacing race, but came back to win the second and third.

Cronin and Team Pay Visit Here

With Manager Joe Cronin in charge, the Washington Senators, contenders for the American League pennant, paid Pittsburgh a short visit last night. The Senators played an exhibition contest yesterday at Wheeling, which they won, 3 to 1.

Manager Cronin took advantage of the layover here to call on some of his Pittsburgh friends. The sunny Californian is the same enthusiastic boy who did a short trick for the Pirates several years ago. He seems to love the responsibility involved in the management of his club. When a friend remarked he would like to see the next world series between the Pirates and Senators, Joe beamed and exclaimed:

SHOOT CARDED

The Swiss Rifle and Revolver Club, of Forest Hills, will open its 1933 season Saturday morning, meeting the East Pittsburgh and Altoona teams in a match on the club range, Filmore road.

SEEDED STARS WIN

BUC CATCHERS LACK PUNCH

to Cincy and you will get a slant on Ernie Lombardi, who, while an awkward catcher, carries a threat at the plate. Slip into the East and visit the Giants and you meet up with Gus Mancuso, Italian boy with a tremendous punch.

Even the lowly Phillies will show you a catcher who can sting the ball for distance and yet compile an average well above .300. Spud Davis has long been reckoned as a constant danger to all pitchers, and in Al Lopez the Dodgers also have a potent socker in the catcher's position.

CATCHERS FALL DOWN

So it would seem incumbent upon one of the three Pirate maskmen to display a consistent wallop at the plate, else the club may go into more bad slumps. Earl Grace, out for two weeks, with a bad leg, shows signs of regaining his last year's hitting form, but Earl's mark still is down among the pitchers. Tommy Padden and Hal Finney are in the same boat.

The Pittsburgh punch in a pinch was absent again yesterday as the Buccos lost to the Cardinals, 3 to 2, in the fourth and final game of the series. The Pirates made two quick tallies on three doubles in the first round and then were through for the day. P. Waner, Vaughan and Traynor smote the two-sackers in succession to make the runs.

HALLAHAN CHECKS BUCS

Bill Hallahan let the invaders down with goose eggs in the remaining rounds. The Cardinals picked up a tally in the second, and George Watkins nicked Heinie Meine for a homer in the fourth to force a deadlock.

Meine had two out and a Redbird on third in the sixth when Medwick rapped out a double to score the winning run. Larry French pitched the last two innings for the Bucs.

The Pirates fell down in a big clinch of the ninth. Gus Suhr opened with a double, but he was nailed at third when Thevenow tried to sacrifice. Hallahan then acted quickly to ring down the curtain.

Columbus Accepts Association Edict

INDIANAPOLIS, June 15.—Branch Rickey, vice president of the St. Louis Cardinals, today said no fight was planned against the order of the American Association directors that the Columbus club, one of the Cardinals' farm teams, be fined $500 and forced to dispose of four of its stars.

The penalty was imposed because the directors ruled Columbus guilty of having violated the Association salary limit agreement. The players who are to be disposed of after Saturday are Art Shires, first baseman; Charley Wilson, second baseman; Gordon Slade, shortstop, and Jim Lindsey, pitcher.

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Johnny Risko vs. Patsy Perroni, Salvatore Ruggirello vs. Eddie Simms and Ted Yarosz vs. Sammy Slaughter, 10 rounds each, and Frankie Wallace vs. Jimmy Vaughn, Freddie Fitzgerald vs. Jackie Davis and Gene Stanton vs. Al Gatchell, 6 rounds each, Stadium, Cleveland.

Jimmy Slavin vs. Georgie Goldberg, 10 rounds, Albany, N. Y.

Dave Barry vs. Chick Wagner, Eddie Edson vs. K. O. McClellan and Pee Wee Jarrell vs. Joe Red, 10 rounds each, St. Louis.

Two important games in the Greater Pittsburgh League and one in the City circuit hold the center of the sandlot baseball spotlight for this evening.

In the Greater Pittsburgh loop, the Parmelee and Swissvale nines are booked for a battle at the Westinghouse High School Field. Neither team can afford to suffer a defeat, which augurs well for the class of baseball that will be on tap.

The second contest brings together two old rivals in Edgewood and Turtle Creek, the game being listed for Edgewood.

BOOKS MEET TEST

In the City League, the Books face a severe test in Whitaker, playing on the Whitaker grounds.

The Pittsburgh Crawfords lost valuable ground in the race for the Negro National League crown yesterday as they bowed to the Chicago American Giants at Cycler Park, McKeesport, 7 to 2. The Giants rallied in the seventh inning to score four runs and sew up the game.

The second game, scheduled for under the lights at Greenlee Field, was called off due to cold weather.

ART ROONEY STARS

In the City League, the Cochrans found the going too rough at Dormont against the crack South Hills aggregation and lost out, 8 to 3. Art Rooney, back in the Cochran lineup, and Packy Vaughan each collected two hits. Tice walloped a home run for Dormont.

The Homestead Grays swung into Ohio for a pair of games yesterday and won them both. In the afternoon, they beat the Scio team, 18 to 3, and in a twilight game at Jewett won, 12 to 6.

Three games were played in the American Legion junior tournament yesterday. Swissvale defeated McKeesport, 9-1; McKees Rocks defeated Turtle Creek, 2-0, and Wilkinsburg defeated Crafton, 9-0.

Humphries, Stroke Victim, Improves

FAIR HAVEN, N. J., June 15.—(AP.)—Joe Humphries, veteran fight announcer who has been paralyzed by an apoplectic stroke, showed further improvement today. His physician said the familiar voice would probably again be heard at sports events.

The physician, Dr. Walter A Rullman, of Red Bank, reported Humphries was able to move his hands more freely today, and to use his right arm a little. He said, however, the announcer would be confined to bed for several weeks.

The illness of Joe Humphries cancels arrangements to have him appear as guest announcer at the Amen Corner picnic here next Wednesday. An announcing duel between Humphries and Ray Eberle was planned.

The Katzenjammer Kids—Happy Hooligan—Maud, herself—good old friends that we first met in childhood and always look forward to seeing. Not alone do their antics amuse us, but the characters appeal to us as symbols of droll nonsense. You undoubtedly have often wished there were some quick way of applying them to a variety of accessories. We now are able to offer you a way of transferring these illustrations, exactly as they are shown, to any article you wish. You need only pin the pattern in place, iron over it as you do with any transfer pattern, and then have the fun of seeing your favorite comic character all drawn on the material—and then your work is done. Sweat shirts, bags, pillows, kiddies' accessories, scarfs, sport caps, all gain an added touch, and a most professional one at that, by the application of these motifs. The motifs can be transferred to cottons, silks, felt and even oilcloth and are washable. The pattern includes a transfer pattern of two each of the three motifs shown, Maud with her friends, the cats, is 3x6 inches; the Kids are 3¾x4 inches, and Happy Hooligan is 3¾x5¼ inches. Directions for stamping the motifs on different materials are given with pattern.

STOCK MARKET MOVEMENT NARROW

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—The stock market appeared a trifle weary today and prices shifted about in an irregularly narrow range, with the trading volume dwindling to its smallest in several weeks.

Although most of the utility and industrial leaders received some support around their closing quotations of yesterday, and several of the rails stepped up moderately in response to the continued improvement in transportation revenues, the vitality of the recent upward swing was lacking. Foreign exchanges slumped in terms of the dollar on reports that currency stabilization was imminent. Wheat displayed early weakness, but steadied later, and corn, rye and oats improved. Cotton did not move very far in any direction. Bar silver was heavy.

Union Pacific was a carrier favorite with an advance of about 2 points. Among the steadier oils were Standard of New Jersey, Socony Vacuum and Consolidated. A demand for Chrysler put that motor issue up around a point at one time. Mining stocks were rather heavy.

Bank stocks have been inclined to sag in the face of conflicting interpretations of the Glass-Steagall act, which promises to have far-reaching influence on banking in this country. Meanwhile, bankers are giving the measure close study in an effort to canvass its full potentialities, although some bank officials have already hinted at the possibility of withdrawals from the Federal Reserve System.

It is thought in some quarters that there may be a considerable shifting of out-of-town bank deposits from New York as the result of the termination of interest payments on demand funds. At the same time, however, it is pointed out that this shifting of deposits would tend to stimulate lending on the part of interior institutions.

Of equal concern to bankers generally is the gyration of the American dollar in European markets. Hope is expressed by most that the dollar-pound rate can be stabilized soon, although there is much guesswork as to what this rate will be. In some quarters it is expected the revised base would be somewhere around $4. Foreign observers stress the importance of an Anglo-American agreement as a necessary first step in bringing about a general stabilization of currencies and an early return to the international gold standard.

WHEAT FALLS TWO CENTS

CHICAGO, June 15. — Wheat prices underwent a quick tumble of 2 cents a bushel early today, unsettled by prospects that maximum processing taxes would be applied to wheat and cotton August 1. Leading traders said the outlook placed the immediate market situation in a fairly doubtful position. Opening ⅝ to 1½ cents lower, wheat soon dropped further. Corn started at a shade to ⅜ cents decline, and later suffered a material setback, but then scored gains.

Although the ultimate outcome of the application of processing taxes was generally conceded as likely to prove extremely stimulating, the present effect was regarded as disturbing to holders, and therefore bearish. Rapid fluctuations in prices ensued, and rallies of about 1½ cents a bushel followed sharp downturns that accompanied heavy selling at the start.

Corn and oats developed relative strength as compared to wheat, owing to spread buying against wheat sales.

Publix Trustees' Removal Denied

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—Federal Judge Frank J. Coleman yesterday denied a motion to remove the three trustees in bankruptcy of Paramount-Publix Corporation and to remove the matter from the jurisdiction of Referee Henry K. Davis.

The motion was brought by Samuel Zirn, counsel for minority bondholders, who contended that the three trustees were participants in an alleged $10,000,000 preference in the Paramount matter.

State Surcharges Ordered by I. C. C.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(INS.)—Refusal of a number of states to apply surcharges in intrastate shipments corresponding to those maintained on interstate traffic, has resulted in unjust discrimination against interstate commerce, the interstate commerce commission held today.

It ordered these states—Ohio, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida and Kentucy—to impose surcharges on intrastate traffic by July 18.

Bar Silver Sags To 35½c an Ounce

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—Silver quotations were lower here today. Bar metal sagged ⅝ of a cent to 35½ cents an ounce, while futures at one time were about ½ cent lower in fairly active trading.

LOCAL STOCKS IRREGULAR, NARROW

Prices moved over a narrow range on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today with the list displaying a generally irregular tone. Early quotations showed only small fractional changes from last night's finals with business fairly widely distributed throughout the list. Lone Star Gas dominated the market in point of volume. The big fuel leader was steady to firm as offerings found buyers at very slight recessions from the previous close. Western Public Service followed the general course of Lone Star but turnover in the former was light.

The heavy industrials were quiet. Recent active dealings in these issues conformed closely to the movement of the "big board" and the uncertainty in the later market the past two sessions has served to slow up the trading in the steels and allied issues here. Miscellaneous specialties showed only nominal charges.

CAPITAL NEWS HITS COTTON

NEW YORK, June 15.—Cotton futures opened easy, 4-6 points lower under commission house selling on an unfavorable view of Washington reports. July, 9.23 cents; October, 9.49 cents; December, 9.61 cents; January, 9.69 cents; March, 9.85 cents; May, 10.00 cents.

July sold off to 9.10 and December to 9.48 during the early trading making net losses of 17 to 19 points. Offerings were fairly well taken by covering and trade buying at the decline however and the market showed rallies of 4 or 5 points from the lowest at the end of the first half hour.

Fluctuations were rather nervous and irregular later in the morning, but the market held fairly steady and some of the early buyers seemed to be covering on the late forenoon bulge which carried July up to 9.22 and December to 9.60. The market at midday was quiet, active months showing net losses of 7 to 9 points.

LIVERPOOL, June 15.—Cotton, 11,000 bales including 6,100 American. Spot in good demand, but business moderate; prices nine points higher; quotations in pence: American strict good middling, 7.08; good middling, 6.78; strict middling, 6.48; middling, 6.33; strict low middling, 6.18; low middling, 5.98; strictly good ordinary, 5.78; good ordinary, 5.48. Futures closed steady. July, 5.99; October, 5.98; December, 6.01; January, 6.02; March, 6.06; May, 6.09.

HEARST PAPERS DEMONSTRATE STABILITY

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15.—Accompanying today the twelfth consecutive quarterly dividend checks for Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., Class "A" 7 per cent preferred shares, was a message from William Randolph Hearst to the more than 37,000 investors in his company, reviewing the successful operations of the past year.

Mr. Hearst points out how the publishing industry has thoroughly demonstrated its capacity to adjust itself to meet changing conditions.

He says:

"The publishing of newspapers was forunate in one respect during the period of inflation. While other products in most instances doubled, trebled and quadrupled in selling price, the price of newspapers increased little, if any, and the cost of advertising increased only with increased circulation.

EARNINGS STABILIZED

"In spite of unprecedented economic conditions, every Hearst institution has paid promptly, when due and in full, all interest and principal payments on bonds in the hands of the public, and has never passed nor reduced the dividend on any of its stock in the hands of the public."

Mr. Hearst's message to stockholders follows:

"It gives me great pleasure to be able to report to the stockholders of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., the results of operations of the corporation for the period ending December 31, 1932.

"In face of unprecedented economic conditions—in fact, in the very lowest depths of the depression—the net income of the corporation was $7,132,000, as compared with $7,487,000 for the year 1931.

"The net income of $7,132,000 represents more than twice the 7 per cent dividend on the entire authorized issue of $50,000,000 Class "A" stock, and represents approximately four times the dividend on the outstanding Class "A" stocks as of December 31, 1932.

COSTS UNDER CONTROL

"I feel that these facts, in and of themselves, will be very gratifying to all stockholders, and will fully demonstrate the soundness of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., Class "A" stock as a conservative investment security, especially during a most trying period.

"Although there is now a definitely better trend in business, nevertheless, the management of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., intends to proceed on the same conservative course it has hitherto pursued.

"Throughout the last three years the publishing business, in common with every other business, has been subjected to enormous strain and pressure. Until the last six weeks the trend was progressively downward, with the result that the gross income was progressively downward.

"To meet this condition, it has been necessary to bring about reduction in operating costs, and other economies.

"This has been rigidly accomplished, with the result that the publishing industry has demonstrated its capacity to meet changing conditions.

"While other products in most instances doubled, trebled and quadrupled in selling price, the price of newspapers increased little, if any, and the cost of advertising increased only with increased circulation.

"In other words, the newspaper publishing industry, while it did not enjoy the ephemeral profits of other industries, likewise, did not contract the habits of extravagance which fastened themselves upon these industries.

SOUNDNESS DEMONSTRATED

"I refer to these little known facts regarding the newspaper publishing industry, as it may throw some light upon the reason for the soundness of this industry when its field is diversified and its business affairs are managed conservatively.

"Personally, I am very proud of the fact that in spite of unprecedented economic conditions, every Hearst institution has paid promptly, when due and in full, all interest and principal payments on bonds in the hands of the public, and has never passed nor reduced the dividend on any of its stock in the hands of the public.

"The usual quarterly dividend on class "A" stock of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., has been voted by the board of directors, payable June 15 to stockholders of record as of June 1.

"I desire to take this opportunity to express my personal appreciation to the more than 37,000 stockholders who have shown their confidence in this institution, and I renew at this time my statement heretofore made, that it shall be the steadfast purpose of the management to conduct the affairs of the corporation so that its Class "A" stock shall be recognized increasingly as a sound and conservative investment, based upon honest management and legitimate earnings."

Forbes

Industry Is Put On Trial; What's Ahead?

By B. C. FORBES

INDUSTRIAL, financial, business leaders have usually in the past regarded as their main mission, their main objective, their main concern, simply money-making. They have regarded industry, finance, business merely as tools to enable them to become rich.

B. C. Forbes

Unless most of them succeed in formulating a new conception of their responsibility, their function, their place in the social, economic scheme of things, trouble of incalculable gravity will be invited.

INDUSTRY, finance, business do not exist for the sake of the few, for the enrichment of the few.

Industry, finance, business, if they are to enjoy opportunity to endure, must be administered for the greatest good of the greatest number. Unless industry, finance, business can be so conducted that reasonable employment, reasonable rewards, reasonable living can be provided for the people, then it is imperative, essential, that a new system be devised and enforced for the conduct of industry, finance, business.

Untrammeled freedom having resulted in several years of acute distress, it is natural that the people should have plumped for a "New Deal."

EVERY INTELLIGENT person (including its own sponsors) recognizes that the "New Deal" embraces many momentous experiments, experiments reaching the very vitals of our social system, experiments embracing our currency system, our banking system, industry, agriculture, transportation, competition.

The new administration's avowed purpose is to co-operate with every important economic group in an effort to bring about more satisfactory conditions.

Our men of affairs should squarely recognize and realize that if co-operation with the government and co-operation among themselves fail, then coercion—dictation—will be enforced.

LIBERTY admittedly incited license. What is now proposed, what is now decreed, is a compromise between unfettered freedom and governmental absolutism.

If this innovation fails, our leaders should not hug any vain delusion that the alternative will be a return to the old, haphazard, go-as-you-please, devil-take-the-hindmost order.

The alternative will be governmental dictation, if not outright governmental ownership.

Let no financial or business magnate imagine for a moment that the "New Deal" will be abrogated at the end of the two years mentioned in the industrial recovery act if in the meanwhile the lot of the people of this country be no happier than it has been during the last three years. Failure will not lead to abolition of governmental activity, but to a larger measure of absolutism.

COMING EVENTS in industry, finance, business will decide whether America shall progress (or descend) towards the status of Russia, or whether we shall preserve a reasonable measue of those "inalienable rights" prescribd in the Declaration of Independence—"life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

The people will assuredly choose to entrust power to those who prove most capable of successful leadership, leadership yielding the most acceptable living conditions to the many.

DO OUR MIGHTY men of affairs grasp these actualities? Do they thoroughly understand the magnitude of the issue at stake? Do they fathom the fate-laden responsibilities confronting them?

Will they prove equal to the occasion, equal to earning confidence, equal to earning scope for individual initiative?

Or will they so act that the majority of citizens, the majority of voters will order them to be subjected to a strait-jacket?

MARKET ACTION HINTS 'POOL' CLEANUPS

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, June 15.—One must be impressed with the fact that something has happened to the market which has changed its action, temporarily at least.

There have been increasingly numerous bad spills or shakeouts. While these have not developed into real breaks, they do suggest that the market may be nervously getting ready for the long-awaited technical reaction.

It has done a great deal of "churning" of late. Of course, that might work out in a consolidation of position, and allow a further rise, as was the case following a somewhat similar period between April 20 and April 27. But one should not bet on this as conditions are not the same now.

At that time bonds were rising steadily. The volume of stock trading did not rise when stocks were weak. There was less of a public following and the technical position was a good deal stronger than now. There were no such near-breaks as we had last Saturday and again the last half hour on Tuesday.

To me it seems that the character of the buying has deteriorated, and has become distinctly more manipulative and attended by strong-arm work. It looks as if various "pool" operators have been staging some final makeups.

Tuesday stocks were obviously pushed up through "resistance" levels, with the aid of drives on short positions in American Telephone and other leaders. The laggard rails were given a good whirl up to a new high. Then they flopped badly at the close.

It certainly seems that it is going to be hard to sustain industrials at much over 95, and rails above 45 (Dow, Jones averages) until the technical position has been cleaned up.

Yesterday the market surged up and down, with the tape running late both on dips and on rallies, the net result being a small decline.

1—The market has lately come to act more in unison, with less shifting from group to group. The rails have shown some independence, but on the whole it seems that the general technical position has become a more predominant factor.

2—Volume does not dry up on dips as it formerly did, and rallies turn easily into reactions.

These are hardly favorable indications as bearing on the near future, and they suggest the possibility of a real setback from somewhere around these levels. No one can be sure. But I doubt the wisdom of playing for such further markups as may come from here, and would certainly not try for anything but hour-to-hour trading turns.

Such "turns" should never be attempted by the small non-professional trader. He will lose every other time, if not oftener!

I wish to repeat that reports of foreign selling seem reasonable. English speculators, for example, must have figured that it is well to take profits while sterling exchange was making dollars less valuable in terms of pounds.

Regardless of current business activity, it is well to remember that the passage of the bank control bill is a blow to financial sentiment, the monetary conference is not going smoothly, the tax on dividends affects equities, and that industrial control is not for the purpose of increasing corporation profits (but rather to raise raw material prices and wages).

COURT ENJOINS RAIL-BARGE RATE CUT

WILMINGTON, Del., June 15.—(INS.)—In a majority opinion handed down yesterday, the United States District Court here enjoined the Interstate Commerce Commission from fixing rail-barge rates for the transportation of cotton without first allowing the railroads a hearing.

The court also set aside an order made by the commission fixing rates for cotton shiped by rail and barge from Arkansas, Tennessee and other western and southern districts. This order was appealed last December in the United States Court here by 32 railroads.

The opinion was concurred in by Judge W. H. S. Thompson, of Philadelphia, and Judge John P. Nields, of Wilmington. Judge Oliver B. Dickinson, of Philadelphia, dissented. An appeal to the United States Supreme Court eventually is expected.

Written by Judge Thompson, the majority opinion declares that while Congress may delegate to the Interstate Commerce Commission as an administrative tribunal the power to fix rates, the result can be lawfully achieved only after a fair and full hearing has been accorded the carriers. The court held such was not the case in the present instance and pointed out that rate fixing without a hearing is unconstitutional.

The case arose from the action of railroads last year in establishing new low co-operative carload rates for cotton in a battle with truck and water carrier competition. A further reduction was later made. Then the Interstate Commerce Commission, without a hearing, on the petition of the American Barge Line Company, ordered the railroads to participate in barge-rail-barge and barge-rail carload rates which it fixed at below the established all-rail rates.

BUSINESS

Stability In Earnings Shown By Hearst Newspapers

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

FEW COMPANIES have been able to maintain their earning power in the face of the devastating business conditions of the past three years. Few have been able to earn more than the dividend requirements on their preferred stocks and to leave a margin for the common.

The companies which have been able to accomplish such a feat stand out in sharp contrast to the great majority of organizations in which the public has a financial interest. They constitute a monument to able management and sound financing in a period when these were sadly lacking.

Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., stands on the list of the limited number of companies able to achieve this record.

Dividend on "A" Stock Covered Four Times

IN REVIEWING the operations of the company, William Randolph Hearst points to the fact that, in the face of unprecedented economic depression, the net income of the corporation was $7,132,000 in 1932, as compared with $7,487,000 in 1931.

The net income for last year represented more than twice the 7 per cent dividend on the entire authorized issue of $50,000,000 of Class "A" stock. This represented about four times the dividend on the number of shares of outstanding Class "A" stock on December 31, 1932.

The newspapers, in common with other industries, were faced with sharp reductions in gross business during the depression period. To meet this condition it was necessary to bring about reduction in operating costs, and other economies. Mr. Hearst declared that this has been rigidly accomplished, with the result that the publishing industry has demonstrated its capacity to meet changing conditions.

Solidity Fundamental To Newspaper Industry

BEHIND THE RECORD of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., is the fundamental solidity of the newspaper industry. In his message Mr. Hearst points out that other products in most instances doubled, trebled or quadrupled in selling price, while the price of newspapers increased little, if any, and the cost of advertising increased only with increased circulation. Mr. Hearst declared:

"In other words, the newspaper industry, while it did not enjoy the ephemeral profits of other industries, likewise, did not contract the habits of extravagance which fastened themselves on these industries.

"I refer to these little known facts regarding the newspaper publishing industry, as it may throw some light upon the reason for the soundness of this industry when its field is diversified and its business affairs are managed conservatively."

COUNTY TO BUY AIRPORT LAND

More than 40 acres of property adjoining the County Airport may be purchased to lengthen the east-west runways and make the airport safer. This property, now owned by the Carnegie Steel Company, can be purchased for $10,226, or $250 an acre.

Commissioner C. C. McGovern said he was willing to make the purchase immediately, as he knew the price was fair and the need for the additional property urgent. If the county purchases the property it will be necessary to provide a fill to make it level with the remainder of the field.

THE CITY ICE AND FUEL COMPANY
PITTSBURGH DIVISION

5904 Penn Avenue,
Pittsburgh, Pa.
May 21, 1933.

THE PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Gentlemen:

Confirming my 'phone conversation of yesterday with you regarding the results I received from an ad in your paper, may I say that I have advertised in every other Pittsburgh paper and have never obtained the satisfaction which the Sun-Tele has afforded me.

To enter into detail concerning the results, I shall further state that fifty-four calls were received in answer to the advertisement; of these prospects I will venture to say that forty would have purchased the car advertised had it not been sold so early in the morning. Calls were received from almost every surrounding town, including Butler and Greensburg—Mount Lebanon, Bellevue and Carrick.

I am so very much pleased with the results I have received from your paper that I should like to be able to let everyone know of the satisfaction received from the two-line ad which I placed in your Sunday's paper.

From this time on, the Sun-Telegraph is my paper.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) William W. Beacom

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Nuloa didn't sail at sunrise, although I was ready for her. Jim and Brearly were ready for her, too. We met as the great sun slipped its moorings. I had my arms full of things that somehow I hadn't found place to pack, and two sleepy savages bore the rest of my belongings on their shoulders.

There were two other passengers waiting at the bridge. One was a big, good-looking Australian named West; the other was a little seedy, middle-aged man with very round and faded eyes. We were to drop them at their respective plantations along the New Guinea coast. Kanakas were busily loading cargo; Brearly was checking off various items of the four tons of equipment and supplies.

We sailed at noon.

The Nuloa was a bonza craft, by comparison with the tiny schooners of my acquaintance around Samarai and Rabaul. Three steps led down from the poopdeck to the cabin—the saloon was just big enough for a table surrounded by eight chairs and a built-in sideboard; a skylight gave light by day, a swinging hurricane lamp by night. There were six tiny cabins.

My own cabin was just big enough to turn around in. It was a nice little cabin, with only one bunk in it. Sometimes between our ports of call five had to bunk in each of the two larger cabins, but even when we carried a planter's wife with us for a few nights my own privacy was never disturbed. That was because—ahem!—I was the star passenger. That is what I told myself at the moment.

INFESTED WITH ROACHES

The chief drawback to my cabin was cockroaches. They ranged in size from little chaps the size of water-bugs to roaches as big as mice. I shouldn't have been so annoyed if I had been sure that they would stay out of my bunk at night. If Elisa, the Fijian steward, forgot to light my hurricane lamp after dark, and I had to enter the cabin with my flashlight, I would surprise them. At night I could hear them playing around among my books and supplies. Sometimes in the morning I could see a little one on the wall beside my bunk, but I don't think a really sizable one ever kept me company. I learned never to grab anything up hurriedly, but to tap it or shake it out first, thus giving the roaches time to take to cover.

My cabin was next to the pantry, which doubtless accounted for the luxuriance of these playmates. In fact, after we had been out for a couple of weeks, Jake, the engineer, inquired genially: "How are the cockroaches in your cabin?"

"It's alive with them," I answered, thinking he was about to suggest an exterminator. He chuckled: "I've been waiting for you to say something about 'em. They gave me that cabin at first, and I couldn't stomach the cockroaches, so I moved me over here." His cabin was on the opposite side of the saloon. So that was it—the Jonah cabin had been wished on me. After that wild horses couldn't have pulled a complaint out of me about cockroaches. A few mornings later I had a sweet revenge. The engineer emerged from his cabin for breakfast, looking dour and rubbing his back. He announced that he had lain so hard on a cockroach that part of its shell had stuck into his back. I grinned cheerfully.

MISCELLANEOUS CARGO

We had what might be called a miscellaneous cargo: timber to be dropped at Dylup Plantation to build new copra sheds; lots of tinned food to be left at various plantations; cases of beer; several hundred cases of petrol to be concentrated at Marienberg for possible use of a trans-Pacific airplane. The foredeck carried Jim and Brearly's eight horses, flocks of ducks and chickens, a sow and a hog, and some goats; also about 50 kanakas belonging to the recruiters and two plantation men. The saloon opened on the foredeck, and between horses, kanakas and barnyard fowl and beasts, it didn't smell too good when we had a head wind.

So, on that lovely morning, I headed away, in the company of seven white men and 60-odd Melanesian savages, for parts unknown. As there seemed to be no place to put one's self, with the decks all piled with cargo, we waved goodbye to Madang from the vantage point of petrol cases. We didn't rate carnival steamers in departing, being only a schooner, but Jim cranked his phonograph and we set out to the tune of the "Froth Blower's Anthem:"

Together, together,
O-O-O, the more we are together,
The hap-pie-er we'll be!

We all met at lunch, or rather at noon-time dinner. The minute I saw Charley, the mate, my heart warmed to him. He it was, I later found, that had been bitterly opposed to carrying a woman aboard the Nuloa for a protracted voyage; for Capt. Alys had gone into a huddle with his two officers about taking me with them. I don't know why Charley's veto didn't win out. Albeit, upon meeting me, he showed no antagonism, whatever his innermost convictions may have been. He was a big man, and once had been splendidly handsome, but 25 years of knocking about the tropics had put their seal upon him. He wore khaki trousers and a knit undershirt, its long sleeves rolled up to his elbows. His hair was straightly parted in the center and slicked down. His mouth was firmly set, so firmly that it seemed to draw lines from his nostrils to the corners of his mouth; his eyes were handsome, but, like his mouth, there was something tragic about them. I didn't know until later that Charley had been down to the dregs of life, through drink, and had come back again. Only once, in all the time I knew him, did he ever take a drink.

A STRANGE STORY

Capt. Alys, I have said, was a little man, inclined to rotundity. He had a way of always looking neat. He had had a cataract removed from one eye, and another was just beginning to grow on the other one. When he was sober Capt. Alys was soft-voiced, courteous, and pleasant; he rarely drank aboard the schooner. One of the strangest stories in the South Seas, that of Capt. Alys. When I sailed with him I already knew some of it, and could understand much in him because thereof. During the following weeks he and I kept many a watch together, and he pieced out the rest of it for me—about the girl he had married, and lost, and found again under the most extraordinary circumstances.

Jake the engineer was scrubbed and hair-slicked to within an inch of his life for the first meal with the lady. Jake was tall, but I don't believe he was two inches thick through.

So here we were—not a coat or a collar among the crowd—though Jim was still deferentially in white ducks.

There was the little man with faded, ingenuous eyes, named Elking, who was an overseer and bound for Borum Plantation. He looked like the pathetic little henpecked husband of the comic strips, but Jim told me he was nothing short of a genius in handling natives.

West, the big Australian, was something different. He didn't talk much, but I have an idea that on his own territory he possessed a lusty good humor.

FIRST MEAL ON BOAT

The ice was gone-finish by the time we left Madang. I was curious to know what sort of kaikai (food) was to be offered aboard this tramp schooner whereon I had cast my lot for an indefinite period. Not that it mattered much, for I had lived on tinned stuffs for so long that I had lost my sense of taste. The first meal wasn't disheartening. There was tinned soup, rice, tinned cod's roe, tinned string-beans, and cocoanut-leavened bread, huge pilot biscuit, tea, and tinned apricots for a sweet. While I was deep in conversation with the mate, Jim called my attention to a small cockroach ambling along the table cloth and headed in my direction. A flip of my fingernail put a stop to his peregrinations.

Our steward-cabin boy was a Solomon Islander, black as ebony; he was supervised by the Fijian chief steward, Elisa. Elisa was a most intelligent savage. His countenance and his disposition were pleasant. He was educated, too, and could read, and write a beautiful hand. Elisa's father had been majordomo and right-hand man to the last hereditary ruler of Fiji; if he had chosen he could have been educated at Oxford with his brother, who is now a prominent lawyer in Suva. But Elisa was indolent and loved the sea, so he had let his opportunities go by. He had no ambition whatever. I'm glad he didn't, for weeks later, when for days the wind and rain tore in fury up and down the Pacific, and we wallowed alone and helpless in the trough of battling waves, and no one had time to remember me languishing with fever and a terrible seasickness, it was Elisa who looked in on me with a tumbler of ginger-beer now and then, and saved me from going daft with thirst and the strange bands of pain around my head. His heathen, kindly face appeared angelic to me then.

THE SPANISH ARMADA SURRENDERING TO SIR FRANCIS DRAKE (1588).

The Reformation resulted in bloody struggles. Civil war raged in Germany, settled for the time being by peace treaty of Augsburg (1555) securing religious toleration. The Netherlands revolted against the oppressive religious methods of Philip II, of Spain, ending in the definite separation of the two provinces (1579). England's scepter swayed, persecuting Protestants and Catholics in turn. Spain, the stronghold of Catholicism, mistress of the seas and oversea lands, attempted under PhilipII to conquer Protestant Englind ruled by Queen Elisabeth. Other than religious causes, such as the pirating of Spanish ships by English seadogs, justified this action. But the Spanish Armada suffered disastrous defeat (1588) by the English under Drake, marking the beginning of English supremacy on the seas. (World's History).

THE NEBULAE (Science)

The nebulae are star clusters of more or less diffuse character. According to location, there are galactic (within our sidereal system) and extragalactic (outside) nebulae. Left: Nebula in Gemini. Right: Ring nebula in Lyra. Both belong to the planetary nebulae, resembling some of the planets. They have brighter portions near the nucleus or in their borders. (Fath: Astronomy).

DIFFUSE NEBULAE (Science)

THE SUGAR BEET (Science)

The sugar beet is bred from the wild beet, has its root completely buried and is propagated from its seeds. It thrives in temperate climate, contains 16-17% sucrose and yields 1.7 to two tons of commercial sugar per acre yearly. (Heriot: The Manufacture of Sugar).

THE SUGAR CANE (Science)

The sugar cane belongs to the botanical family of grasses, sometimes attains the height of twenty feet. In the tropics it flowers and produces seeds, is mostly propagated by cuttings from the stem, contains 14-16% sucrose and yields 4 to 6 tons per acre yearly of commercial sugar.

YOUR NEWSPAPER AND HOW IT IS MADE (Cont'd) (Science)

The pictures made by photographers, assigned to outsstanding cases in the news of the day, are reproduced in the daily newspaper upon the photographers' return to their offices: 1. A photographer at work in a darkroom in which his plates are developed and printed. 2. An artist retouching photographs to reinforce characteristic lines, eliminate disturbing ones to asure clear reproduction. 3. The cartoonist, who combines wit, humor, art to emphasize highlights in the news of the day. 4. The first step in photoengraving, the process by which "cuts" (engravings) are made from pictures and drawings: A photographer making a negative by photographing a picture (called 'halftone' to distinguish from line drawings without shades) through a screen which decomposes the shades into dots (usually 60 to the inch for newspaper work). The negative image is then transferred photographically to an acidproof-coated, sensitized zinc plate. 5. Etching the zinc plate in nitric acid, which "eats" the unprotected areas and leaves the (coated) dots or lines which form the picture. 6. The engraver's routing machine, a rotating needle-like cutter, with which areas that are to appear as white are cut deeply into the zinc cut. 7. Mounting the cuts on wooden or metallic blocks to make them type-high for reproduction after assembly in the pages (as shown in Pictorial Education of June 13, 1933).

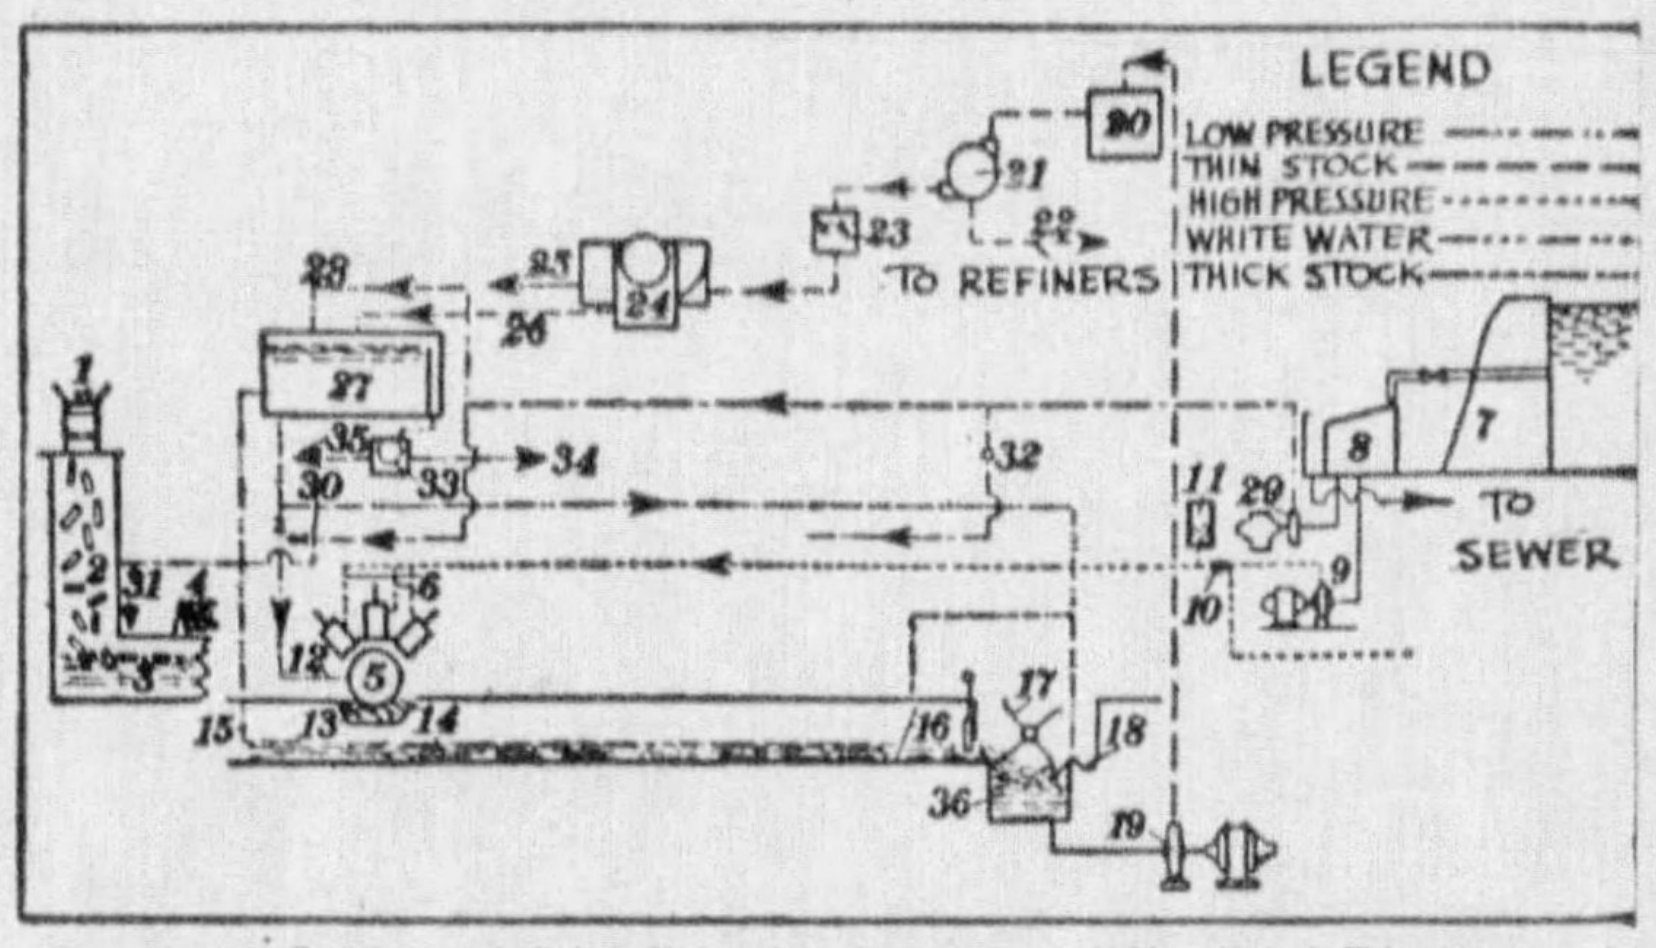
PULPWOOD GRINDER (Science)

The most important raw material of paper is wood, which is ground and converted into pulp. Coniferous trees are generally utilized. A three-pocket grinder is shown: 1, grindstone; 2, shaft; 3, holding flanges; 4, bearings; 5, base plates; 6, covering; 7, cross braces; 8, pockets for pulpwood; 9, supporting bolts; 10, hydraulic cylinder containing a piston; 11, water valve; 12, piston rod; 13, pressure foot; 14, shower pipe; 15, pit; 16, dam. The water admitted at 11 under great pressure forces the pulpwood by 13 against the revolving grindstone, which reduces it to pulp.



Courtesy of Joint Executive Committee of Vocational Education and the McGraw Hill Book Co. From: Manufacture of Pulp and Paper.

LAYOUT OF A PULP MILL (Science)

A conveyor, 1, delivers pulpwood to a bin, 2, connected to a water tank, 3, by which it is floated to a measuring rack, 4, and fed into grinders, 5. High pressure water enters at 12, mixes with the fibres in a pit, 13, overflows into a sewer, 14, uniting with sluicing water from a pipe, 15. Passing through strainers, 16 and 17, the coarsest material is scraped into the sewer, 18. The finer fibre passes into a pit, 36, and is pumped into a box, 20. Passing through a filter, 21 (the tailings are diverted to a refiner, 22), the fibres float into a box, 23 and a concentrating machine, 24, for shipment, 25. The water is used again (26-35).

Advice From an Old Indian Guide

As this is the opportune moment for dashing into the great outdoors with a canoe on your back we will wise you to some important timer talk.

A portage is the distance between two rivers. You might start with the Hudson and the Mississippi. They're so big you won't miss them when you come to them.

When portaging put your canoe on your back and walk under it. When it rains turn the canoe upside down and lurk under it. When you want to sleep you also turn the canoe over like a turtle and crawl beneath it. In fact, there ain't anytime when a canoe is rightside up even when you are paddling on the river.

Having carried your canoe overland a thousand miles to the Mississippi you can well feel that your portaging lessons are fairly under control. You should be one of the world's best portagers.

Always remember that moss grows on the south side of trees. In case you are lost never forget this. If you are never found at all you should still have this imbedded firmly in your last will and testament.

GOOD NIGHT! I'VE WALKED TEN MILES AN' FORGOT TH' PADDLES!

If called on for an impromptu radio talk it is pleasant to recall suddenly that moss grows on the south side of trees. It will fill in many an awkward pause and is a good sales point in the electric washing machine business.

Before cooking a can of beans bore a hole in the top. Otherwise, the beans will explode. Don't start a fire with green wood. Paint it some other color. If the wind is from the west never sleep on the east side of a campfire unless you think that Al Jolson ain't got enough imitators now.

If your feet hurt rub soap in your shoes. On a hot day this will start a lather. The bubbles will run over the top of your shoes and you can skate to your destination. At the end of the hot summer day there will be enough lather left in your shoes to shave with. We are giving you the benefit of our experience. The great, silent woods are no place for doorslammers and fault finders.

When going over Niagara Falls in a canoe never get excited. Don't pay any attention to warning yells from people on shore. They're jealous of you and your fun.

Zoning Board Vacancy

Mayor Herron Can Render Valuable Service by Making a Good Appointment.

Mayor John S. Herron has an opportunity to do the people of Pittsburgh an important favor. If he will make a good appointment in filling the vacancy on the Zoning Board thoughtful citizens will appreciate his action and will not be ungrateful.

Pittsburgh has been fortunate in the fact that the Zoning Board has been kept out of politics. Even at times when the spoils system of filling public offices was at its worst, and little regard was given in making appointments to anything but selfish partisan considerations, there has been no departure from the plan of leaving the Zoning Board alone.

That has been the policy of every Mayor since the board was originated. It is to be hoped Mayor Herron will adhere to this admirable custom.

Thanks to this policy, the board has always felt free to pursue an independent course. The pleas of politicians for a setting aside of the restrictions have fallen on deaf ears.

Residential sections have thus been protected from commercial encroachment, the citizens' welfare safeguarded, and real estate values preserved.

The London Conference

The American Delegates Owe It to American Workers To Protect Them from Coolie Competition.

As the spokesmen of 66 nations foregathered at London for the international monetary and economic conference, France took additional steps to control its trade on a national basis.

Likewise, on the eve of the conference, the British served their own national interests by making trade treaties with France, Belgium and the Argentine.

Meantime, the visionary Cordell Hull, Secretary of State and head of the American delegation, has been up in the intellectual clouds.

Ignoring the realities of international competition and the general disequilibrium of trade and living standards, Mr. Hull, in the spirit of a mid-Victorian, has piously denounced the concept of economic nationalism and has argued for tariff reduction.

On the other hand, the realistic French, not too much impressed with the lofty sentiments expressed at conferences, introduce a well sponsored bill in the Chamber of Deputies to set up a special surtax of 15 per cent against imports from the United States.

The object is to offset any trade benefit that may have come to American exporters from the depreciation of the dollar.

France evidently is not impressed with the free trade doctrine that it is good to import bargains, even if it throws native workers out of employment and tends to reduce wages and living standards.

Though Mr. Hull sentimentally yearns for a return to earlier conditions of freer trade, Great Britain, the one free trade country, has in recent years definitely rejected free trade as its own way of national life and has become strongly protectionist.

In the light of the demonstrated preferences of these two great countries, it will be well for the American delegates at London to remember the saying of a wise man who remarked, "What you are speaks so loud that I cannot hear what you say."

The American group should recognize that it is their duty to consider only such policies as will heighten the total trade and the standard of living in the United States.

As the country is making heroic efforts to escape from a paralyzing economic depression, no half baked and puerile experiments in ill considered tariff reductions should be made.

To expose the American workingman to the unrestrained competition of countries with coolie standards would be to plunge the country anew into an economic abyss.

It will be the task of the realists in the American delegation and in the White House to hold Mr. Hull in check, and prevent him from translating his sentimental theories into national policy and national catastrophe.

Undue Leniency

The Gravity of the Offense of the Crooked Squires Is Minimized by Inadequate Sentences.

The offense of the justices of the peace and constables who swindled the people of Allegheny County out of thousands of dollars by collecting fees and costs for fictitious cases is made to look trivial by the inadequate sentences imposed by Judge Samuel H. Gardner.

He has made it possible for the criminals to escape with only four months' imprisonment by saying he may parole them after they have served that long if "substantial restitution" is made.

These trusted officers of the law betrayed their trust and stole thousands of dollars from Allegheny County, yet their punishment is no more severe than is sometimes imposed for violations of the game law or other petty offenses involving no moral turpitude.

Mountain Laurel

Now Is the Time to Get Acquainted with Pennsylvania's New State Flower.

After 20 years of discussion, during which voluminous advice and innumerable suggestions were offered by women's clubs, schools and other organizations, the Legislature, at its recent session, adopted, with Gov. Pinchot's approval, the mountain laurel as Pennsylvania's state flower.

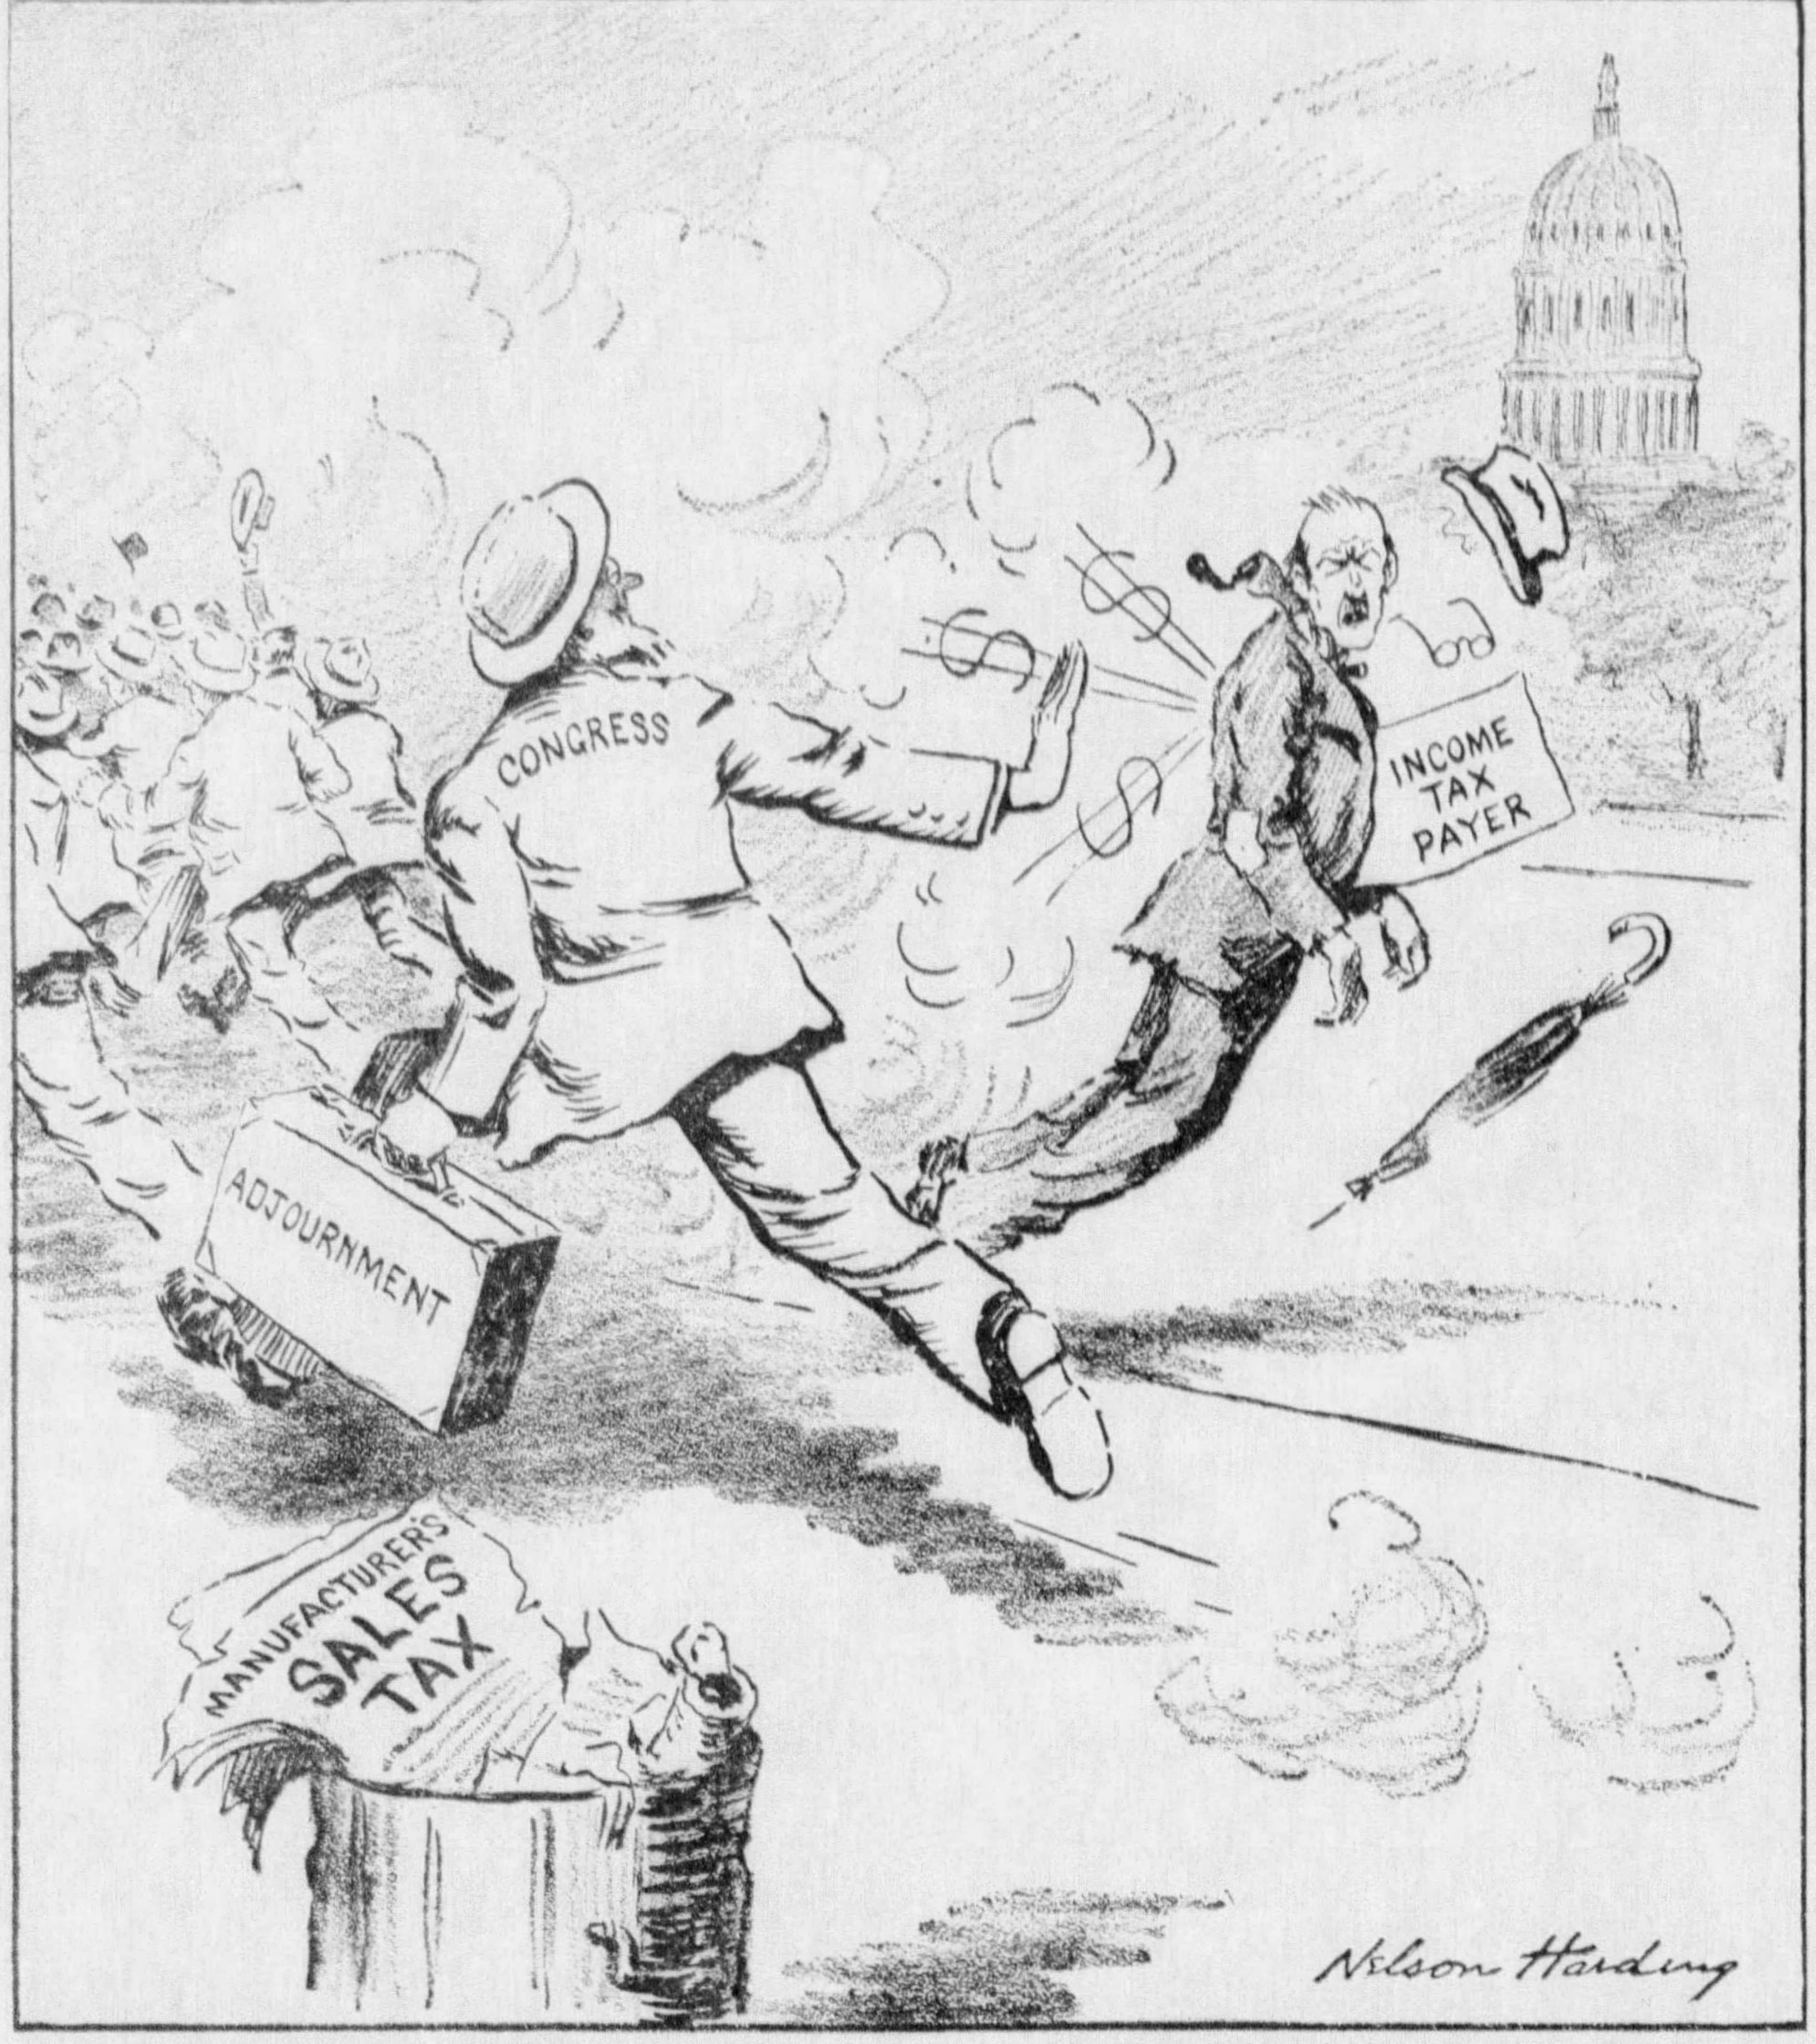
The official emblem chosen with such care and study is worthy of the citizens' consideration, and now is the time of times to see it in all its glory and beauty. For the beautiful pink and white blossoms are at their best in early June.

The Pocono Mountains in Monroe and Pike Counties, and the Allegheny Mountains in Center County are famous for the beauty of their laurel blossoms. But beautiful clumps of laurel may be found much nearer Pittsburgh, in Westmoreland, Butler and Armstrong counties.

The handsome flowers are doubly [illegible] this year because of their new [illegible].

'Tax, You're It!'

By Nelson Harding



Here is the latest game of tag.
The lad that always holds the bag
Is on the backbone roughly hit
And he, as usual, is "It."

It's "Tax, you're it" then runs away—
An easy game for some to play.
Is hit, as ever, good and hard!

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

June Moon-ings

After the spring romance, there always comes the "remorse"—when the woman wonders how on earth she got into it and the man wonders how on earth he is going to get out of it.

* * *

A girl may sometimes wonder if it is possible to be in love with two people at the same time—but a man's chief problem, at this season, is whether it is possible to love ONLY two.

I SEEM TO LOVE 'EM ALL

Don't go out and buy a bottle of prussic acid or a rope, just because one love-affair goes dead and you have a dull evening on your hands. You can't get more juice out of an orange, more speed out of a car or more thrills out of life than there are IN it. And even on the path of love, there are bound to be long, monotonous, level stretches between the high spots.

* * *

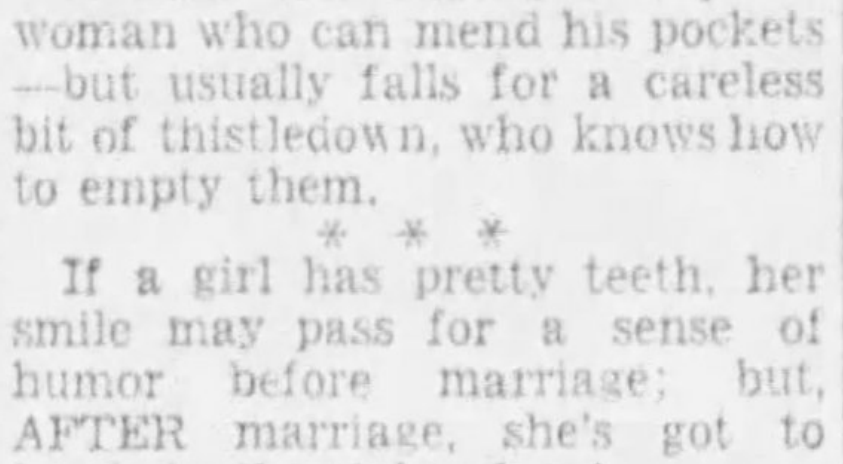
Somehow, a man's insistence on being "just a good pal" always fills a woman with an inferiority complex—until the next man comes along and tells her that he loves her in quite a different way.

* * *

A man can admire a capable woman who can mend his pockets—but usually falls for a careless bit of thistledown, who knows how to empty them.

* * *

If a girl has pretty teeth, her smile may pass for a sense of humor before marriage; but, AFTER marriage, she's got to laugh in the right place!



Most of us have discovered to our sorrow that "Easy Street" was just a Fool's Highway, with a lot of detours—all leading to the breadline.

* * *

When a woman looks into a mirror, it is for reassurance; but when a man glances at a looking glass, it is for pure pleasure.

* * *

This is the month when many a man is "taken for a ride"—but never realizes it, until he finds himself on the way back from the church.

Isn't It So?

Ambition can creep as well as soar.

He who does one fault at first and lies to hide it, makes it two.

Brains are not everything, but everyone should admit that they help a lot.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 15.—Few figures in the comedy of city life have so mastered lime-light technique as A. C. Blumenthal, the 105-pound dynamo, who gained spurs in movie theater financing. He attained first headlines by acting as host and dragoman to Jimmy Walker in private car jaunts here and there.

Later he expressed a flair for theatrical producing, accepting temporarily Ziegfeld's toga, was "profiled" in The New Yorker, sports the longest imported limousine in town and tosses bon voyage binges for such social lights as Lady Furness. At this affair he executed his most notable coup de grace.

The entertainer for the evening was Maurice Chevalier for whom Social Registerites angle futilely for private parties. Yet for "Blumie," Chevalier sung his entire repertoire. Blumenthal is a soft spoken sprout.

Often he sits among loose-end royalty parasites, receiving their sycophancy with tongue in cheek, and rewarding them by stuffing their stomachs. In social conquests, he suggests the humming bird over the flower. His vitality confuses his destiny, but one thing is certain, there is life in him.

* * *

I met Maurice Chevalier for the first time recently. He was gracious enough to say: "I read your air-tickles veree much" I told him how in early days of his Paris furore I thought as result of those blue and white street corner signs proclaiming simply "Maurice Chevalier" he was a street. "Not I hope," he replied, "ze forgotten byway." And, shucks, we got off one thing after another like that, no end. It was interesting that in a more serious moment he declared he was unable to sing without his straw hat. Not even a derby or silk gibus will do.

* * *

It's appropriate here, too, to swirl a cape again to the accomplished Norma Terris for her impersonation of Chevalier, even to the protruding lip and pigeon-toed walk. No performer in the past three years has revealed such progress in the art of mimicry as this wife of the Rialto physician, Dr. Jerome Wagner. By a mere tousel of her auburn hair, she brings you Marie Dressler as the hiccupy harridan, again in the ang-gang-gah of Bert Lahr and hosts of others.

* * *

A correspondent I do not know sends news of beautiful Annabelle Whitford, so deftly portraying the Gibson girl in the Follies. She, too, is married to a physician and lives in Chicago's North Side. Although her hair is grayed she is still of distinguished beauty and charm and her life is devoted to charity in the tenements.

One of the human clock-regulators along Park avenue is Albert Keller, controlling the destiny of Ritz Hotels in America. A more than six-footer and well proportioned 250 pounder, he swings—why are all big men graceful?—down the avenue from Fifty-seventh street at exactly 5:15 p. m. and in enormous strides turns at Forty-seventh to his hotel. Pedestrians pivot with the awe of boys eyeing a champion. Neither the wind, rain nor snows have prevented this afternoon parade for 20 years.

A distinguished juckling in McComb, Miss., chides me for speaking of sour bonds as defaulted. "You should know," he avers in amiable sneer, "that to financiers such bonds have merely 'suffered impairment of negotiability because of maturity.'" That's swanking up thieving!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

This is going to be about Perfectly Good People—absolutely righteous people, who never get in messes or make fools of themselves.

Such people give me, as they give any normal human, a pain in the neck. Something in me instinctively revolts against them and regards them with the foulest suspicion.

Once I thought that I felt this way because I was a natural sinner and, as such, hostile to all saints. Now I realize that hostility to Perfect Goodness has a much more respectable basis.

I HATE 'EM BECAUSE THEY'RE FAKES.

They are claiming halos just because they Stay Put; never break laws; never start anything. But that's not a sign of goodness. To the contrary, it's a proof of a most vicious form of badness.

THERE ARE TWO WAYS OF BEING BAD.

ONE IS TO DO SOMETHING.

THE OTHER IS TO DO NOTHING.

DOING NOTHING CAN BLOCK THE WHEELS OF PROGRESS QUITE AS VICIOUSLY AS RAISING 57 VARIETIES OF CAIN.

A decision NOT to do is as real a decision and deliberate a choice as a decision TO DO—and leaves as definite a mark on your and the other fellow's life.

THERE ISN'T A HAIR'S DIFFERENCE IN VICIOUSNESS BETWEEN THE COWARD WHO DOES NOTHING AND THE CRIMINAL WHO STARTS SOMETHING.

Really Good People do something with their goodness. They break laws—old, silly, bad laws which need to be broken. They start something — noble revolutions, splendid crusades. They make experiments, take risks, lead forlorn causes—as Christ did, and His martryed disciples, and all the brave bewildered souls who have followed their glorious, bloody trail.

Which of course means that, in the eyes of the world, a really good person makes all kinds of a fool of himself, and suffers the consequences.

SO IF YOU MEET A PROFESSED SAINT WHO ISN'T SUFFERING ANY CONSEQUENCES, YOU CAN DARNED WELL BET THAT HIS SAINTLINESS IS AT LEAST 95 PER CENT SYNTHETIC.

IN SHORT, HE'S NO SAINT AT ALL, BUT A PLAIN PIKER WHO HAS PICKED A GOOD ACT.

Of course he gets by with it—and the reason is plain. We humans are a lazy, cowardly, conceited outfit. Regardless of how we applaud action in theory, we secretly shrink from it in practice. We hate hard work. We dread danger. We have a horror of humiliation. And Real Righteousness is apt to be the hardest, most dangerous and humiliating job anyone can tackle.

But still, it's so nice to be Good! And we're all strong for goodness, if it carries no disagreeable obligations or consequences. So, naturally, if anyone can show us a way to duck the risks, yet save our respectable faces—we're all for it, and them.

And why do I hate 'em? That's why.

The Human Side of the News

The Frontier Nursing Service in Eastern Kentucky—Mrs. Breckenridge's Good Work—A Christmas Baby on Hell for Sartin

By EDWIN C. HILL

THE work that is being done today in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky by the Frontier Nursing Service is as fine and as unselfish a piece of true American endeavor as I have ever heard about . . . A quaint and interesting place those East Kentucky Mountains . . . A land almost without roads—without transportation. A land where the lineal descendants of Elizabethan Englishmen and Englishwomen speak the language of Shakespeare. A land of arrested civilization. A land where the women know the meaning of suffering. There are no hospitals over large areas. Few doctors can make a living because of the bitter poverty of the people.

Mrs. Mary Breckenridge, herself Kentucky-born, knew what those women of the East Kentucky Mountains of Red Bird and Flat Creek and Hell for Certain and Beech Fork were enduring in agony whenever they brought children into the world. Mary Breckenridge, a fine-looking woman of middle age, with a strong, appealing, sensitive face. She resolved that something had to be done for those hewers of wood and tillers of the fields of East Kentucky, the mountain women. She knew what went on when young mothers of 14 and old mothers of 20 came to their hour. Lives hung in the balance. The old granny women brewed a tea they made from soot. They recited holy spells or laid an ax, edge up, on the bed. They called in quack doctors. She knew the hills. Nobody hurries in the hills.

* * *

Nurses Follow The Laurel Trails

BUT gone from this primitive land is much of the vigor and hope of their forefathers who followed Daniel Boone over the Cumberland Trail. Most of the mountain mothers go silently through their long agony of bringing life into the world, and too many died. So Mary Breckenridge organized that wonderful body known as the Frontier Nursing Service which sends trained pub-health nurses along the laurel trails and into the heart of the mountains, and provides a doctor service and blessed alleviatives of pain, and teaches the people all the things they need to know.

There are 30 nurses, a medical director, an 18-bed hospital at Hyden, on Horse Creek, and other services as well. They serve 800 square miles in the seven counties in Leslie, Perry, Clay, Bell, Harlan, Knox and Ousley, the feud country. Nearly 8,000 people, most of them women and children, are in their care. None but the ablest women, carefully trained, are employed in the Frontier Nursing Service, so often are they thrown on their own resources when it may mean life or death.

There isn't an hour of the day when a thrilling battle isn't being waged against disease and death by these devoted nurses. A quick summons comes to the directing center at Wendover, or to the hospital at Hyden. In 10 minutes the nurse is on her way, on horseback, along the winding trails, leading ever upward along the cliffs and through the laurel. She wears heavy sheepskin coat, boots and breeches. She carries a 40-pound saddle bag and a layette. It means hard riding on rocky trails, up icy slopes where the mountaineers may have to chop out the ice ahead. In spring the nurse swims her horse across the swollen rivers and creeks. She wears rubber cape and hood in bad weather, like those of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police—and she is made of the same kind of heroic stuff. She rides with a hurricane lantern, and with a flashlight in a pocket of her coat.

* * *

Christmas Baby on Hell fer Sartin

IN the cabin she is headed for there may be no light except the flickering fire of the hearth. Lives may depend on that lantern and flashlight. Her task was hard at first—still is. They are a proud people, those mountaineers—proud, shy, suspicious, fiercely resentful of patronage. Slow-moving, quiet, low-voiced men, they are quick to shoot when they feel their rights or their honor are being violated. In the Civil War most of them fought for the North. In the World War thousands were quick to volunteer and many came back with medals.

In the feuds of days gone by families fought families until sometimes all the menfolk were wiped out.

One night, a snowy Christmas Eve, two nurses started for Possum Bend. It took three hours to make the journey in the gulch along Hell fer Sartin Creek. . . They came to the rocky slope known as Devil's Jump. They led their horses up the slippery trail to the log cabin. The single room was dimly lighted by a little coal oil lamp and a small fire on the hearth. The walls were covered with pictures torn from magazines. A couple of neighbor women were there boiling water in a huge kettle.

Sally, the mother-to-be, who was known as "The sewinest and workinest woman on the creek" had been undergoing her agony for three long hours. A little after midnight there was born the first Christmas baby on Hell fer Sartin. When told that she had an eight-pound daughter, Sally studied the child: "I reckon," she said, "she's a perty right young un" . . .

They talked about a name for her baby. One nurse suggested Noel Mary, and Sally was greatly pleased. So after Merry Christmas and a cup of good hot coffee, the nurses mounted their horses and rode on down the mountain. The storm had cleared and a moon shone down upon the snowy hillsides . . . A lovely world for Sally's Noel Mary.

PLAY BOY ALONE

By Winifred Black

The play boy is in trouble. Bitter trouble.

You never could help liking Play Boy—not to save your life. He was so gay, so light hearted, so full of laughter—why, he made the sun come out on the darkest day.

You might be down at the bottom of a deep well of depression—nothing doing, nobody there, all your friends in trouble, all your enemies stepping right along to the top.

Not so young as you used to be—not so strong as you wish you were, not so wise as you liked to make yourself believe. Nothing flavored just right when you sat down at the table.

All the old clothes too shabby and all the new clothes too dear. Every book you picked up had a sting in it. Why, even the radio moaned, maybe—and all at once in came Play Boy.

Just out of a bath, hair brushed till it shone like satin. Eyes as bright as the blue waters of the great bay, shining in the sunshine. What a glitter of white teeth. What a spring in the walk, what a joyous voice of gay greeting.

"Listen, I'll hum the new song—is that a darb or isn't it? Mary's got a new beau, awfully nice fellow he seems to be, plenty of money, too, for a wonder.

Before the play boy was through you snatched your hat and put on your coat and went out to play—yourself. Yes, indeed—rather a nice world for the play boy when all the world wanted was a good play fellow with nothing to do but play.

And now, all of a sudden, he finds that things are different everybody is hustling and paying strict attention to business.

The poor play boy, he's all alone. Nobody has time for him—any more. Nobody wants him and worse than that everybody is ashamed that they ever did want him.

They lecture him—if they have to see him at all. But most of the time, they don't see him. They just step around the corner when they see him coming.

The play boy is bewildered—he doesn't know what it is all about. He's the same play boy he was all the time—he hasn't changed at all.

Poor play boy, I'm beginning to be sort of sorry for him myself—don't you feel that way about it, too?
